NEW ENGLAND MUTUAL LIFE INS.
Of Boston, Mass., Chartered in 1843.
Capital and accumulation, $650,000.

THIS Company is one of the oldest, and among the most prudently and successfully conducted in the country. The primary object in conducting its business has been to provide perfect security under all conceivable circumstances, for the payment of its losses under its policies, and to return to the insured the surplus at stated periods, and strict economy in its management.

Every insured person is a member of the company and shares in the profits of the business, and is subject to no liability or assessments beyond his premium. The directors are required to be particularly interested in the company, and they give their personal attention, and bonds of sufficient security are given by its officers for the faithful performance of their duties. Insurance may be effected for the benefit of the wife, which is secured to her by law beyond the reach of a husband's creditors; and creditors may insure the lives of debtors.

Highly Important to Farmers.
THE ONLY EXCLUSIVE FARMERS' INSURANCE COMPANY IN THE WEST.

THE MADISON MUTUAL,
LOCATED AT MADISON, WISCONSIN.

THIS Company continues to take risks upon Farm Property only, including buildings of all kinds (belonging to farmers), household furniture, grain in barns, live stock, etc., from one to five years, at lower rates than most other responsible companies. All losses promptly paid at the office as soon as proof is made thereon.

We believe it to be for the interest of the farmers to insure by themselves, their property being less hazardous than any other, consequently you will have no losses only your own of the same class, and all will be on an equal footing.

Experience has shown that two-thirds, if not three-fourths of all the fires that occur are upon stores, taverns, mills, shops and such like buildings. These are the property of the farmer, and he believes to be without a parallel in the history of insurance.

Precisely one week from that day, Paul and Lucille were married; and a very happy, prosperous marriage that at Number 13, Rue des Capucines, proved for a considerable time—adversity had greatly improved Madame Verdot, than whom a more kind, prudent, notable, industrious wife, could scarcely be. She was soon able to manage the business, and guide the house much better than her husband could pretend to do, and everybody said Paul had obtained a jewel of a partner. He thought so himself; the brightest and most precious in the world—but for one flaw therein, which, in his eyes, gradually overgrew and dimmed its radiance. Lucille was, he felt, a dissembler in one important particular at least; the child whom she kept in such rigorous seclusion—always appearing restless and agitated if even he addressed a few words to her! What honest cause could there be for that? His grandmother's warning of the deceptive and impenetrable character of the Borlase family, constantly recurred to his mind in spite of himself. Then the child, who appeared to be about six years of age, did not in the slightest degree resemble either of her reputed parents. They had both olive complexions, and dark hair and eyes, whilst the young Lucille was a beautiful blonde, with finely chiselled patrician features—"Like," Paul would sometimes passionately murmur, "the haughty impress of himself with which a proud aristocrat might stamp with shame an honest family." Worse than all, it had come to Paul's knowledge that his wife had received several letters through a private channel, with respect to which she would only, when questioned, say they came from a relative of her daughter's, and did not in the slightest degree concern any one else, certainly not her husband. All this had an evil effect upon Paul Verdot's habits. He began to frequent much more than he ought to have done, a wine shop near the Pont Neuf, kept by one Bontemps, and this led of course to fresh altercations with his wife. One morning, after a late breakfast, during which he had listened in moody silence to his wife's earnest remonstrances upon his growing habits of intemperance, he raised his pale, almost haggard face, from the hands in which it had been buried, and looking at her with something of sad sternness, said: "Lucille, when we married, I gave you everything; I do not mean alone my worldly substance—though that was considerable, and has been ever since, as you know, more yours than mine—I gave you all—my heart, my confidence, my every thought and is open and plain to you. You cannot say the same, Lucille; and yet you must know it is the weight of the accused secret you so jealously guard, that is sinking me in the abyss of low vice which I abhor as much as you do."

"What accused secret? Surely—"

"The child!" cried Paul, starting to his feet, and addressing his wife with passionate and imploring voice and gesture. "Tell me in what way it is connected with you—who the mysterious correspondent of yours is; let me know the worst there be. I will bear anything for your sake, beloved Lucille—even shame—if you will but be frank and candid with your husband."

"Shame!" repeated the wife, rallying with the sting of the word. "How dare you address such a word to me? I will tell you nothing."

"Then I am a lost man!" exclaimed Paul; and seizing his hat he rushed out of the house, and in a few minutes was seated in the wine-shop. He was still there when evening fell, very early—for the month was January, and the weather unusually dark and cold—and had been drinking freely all day, when a message arrived from Madame Verdot who wished to speak with him without delay. Paul rose sullenly and followed the messenger home. The establishment he found was closed, the workpeople dismissed, and his wife dressed as if going out. She was very pale and seemingly excited, but her manner was unusually kind and caressing.

"Paul," she said, laying her hand on his arm as he fell into a chair, "I am going out—I and the child; a fiacre is waiting for us at the back gate, and I shall not probably return for several hours." The husband made no reply, and she went on: "I have given Jeannette leave to go home, and I hope therefore you will not go out again. And Paul," added the wife, kissing his forehead, "I feel I have been much to blame in having any concealments from you, and I promise you, that to-morrow you shall know all."

"To-morrow I shall know all, you promise?"

"I do, solemnly. And now good-bye for a while."

She went out, and presently Paul Verdot heard the smack of a whip and the sound of departing wheels from outside the back-yard entrance. He sat for a considerable time in a sort of confused, dozy dream, but the fire getting low, he roused himself, raked the embers together, threw on two or three fresh logs, and resealed himself, his wife's promise, as he described it, gradually warming his heart.

"I shall know all to-morrow," he audibly ejaculated, and as the words passed his lips, his eye fell on the smouldering fragment of a letter, rendered visible in the far corner of the chimney-place by the renewed fire-light. To start up, seize it, and devour its contents as far as they could be discerned—for the fire had obliterated all but a few detached sentences—was the work of a moment. It was signed "Auguste," and "chere Lucille" was implored not to lose a moment in coming with "our child" to Selis, a hamlet about a league from Amiens, on the northern road, and to bring "as much silver money, and 'clothes' with her as possible, instant flight being imperative! The accused words seemed to swim in fire before the frenzied gaze of the unfortunate man, and for a moment he was paralysed by the terrible discovery; for a moment only. "Infernal traitress!" he vociferated; "I know all to-night, and may reach you yet." He then bounded up the stairs, found several bags of caus, which he knew were there in the morning, had been taken away, and that most of his wife's clothing were gone. There needed no further confirmation of the letter; and in five minutes Paul Verdot was on the road to Selis—armed.

It was about half-past eleven, according to Bontemps, when Paul Verdot returned to the wine shop. He was as white as a corpse, and there was a large swelling on his forehead as if he had received a violent blow, or had fallen down and struck himself heavily, which he said was the case. He told Bontemps that his wife would not return till the morning, and as there was nobody at home, not a servant even, he felt so lonely that he wished to sleep at his Bontemps' house. This was acceded to, and he went to bed at once. Very early in the morning a message came from Madame Verdot, that breakfast was ready, and her husband anxiously waited for. Bontemps delivered the message himself to Paul, who stared while he spoke like a man in a dream, but said nothing, got up, dressed himself, and went home.

Paul Verdot, but for the strong shudder which passed over him as he encountered the surprised yet cheerful look of his wife, looked more like a stone image moving by automatic power than a living man. "Sit down, dear Paul," said Lucille, smilingly: "I have good news for thee. Ah! I see how it is," she added; "thou hast seen this piece of a letter which I found on the table. I dropped it last night, I suppose; and it has put wicked thoughts in that jealous pate of thine. Never mind, I am now going to explain everything, and satisfactorily, too, as thou wilt find."

"Brandy!" gasped the husband, faintly; "brandy!" It was given him; and his wife, though apparently much astonished, proceeded: "After all, ma foi, the explanation is a very simple one. The child was the daughter of the Comte and Countess Auguste de Vervay. They are proscrits, as you know; and the child was confined to me under a solemn promise never to divulge its name to a living soul, for fear of those Paris bloodhounds. The countess has been long confined to her bed with illness, so that they could not till lately leave the concealment they had found, to attempt escaping from the country. That peril is now, however, surmounted, and they are, I trust, beyond the reach of their persecutors. The letter was, of course, from the count; the clothes were required for the disguise of the countess, and the silver money was also essential; and see, mauvaise leue, here is the exchange I have made," added Lucille, who had a keen eye to the main chance, displaying with great glee, several jewels, evidently of great value.

The mental pallor of Paul Verdot's countenance had not been in the slightest degree diminished by his wife's revelation, to which he only faintly replied by saying, "Go on—go on. What more?"

"What more! Parbleu, that surely is enough. There is nothing else to say that I know of, except that the Chevalier Meudon, a friend of the count's who has been living perdu, not far from the back of our premises, and who has frequently slept in the stable, unknown to you, when apprehensive he was beset, will, I fear, find it difficult to get off, as the count informed me pursuers had obtained a hint of his hiding-place. I thought it possible he might have sought shelter here last night, and that was one reason I sent everybody away, and asked you to stop at home, who, I knew, would never betray a poor hunted fugitive. But, hear, Paul, what is the matter? Help! help! My God, he is dying!"

He was not dying, but rapidly losing consciousness; which, however, a glass of brandy restored sufficiently to enable him to say, in a husky, rapid voice: "Listen, Lucille, and hear how your accused secret has destroyed me. I found that fragment of a letter, pursued you to Selis, and could nowhere find you there. I returned, crazed in mind, utterly crazed; for I swallowed brandy at every cabaret upon the road. I burst into this room, and, reclining upon the canepe there, saw the figure of a man asleep. In my frenzy I rushed at, grappled with him, and was grappled in return. A fierce, terrific conflict ensued. Several times I dashed him on the floor, and at last I received this blow upon the forehead, which rendered me insensible. How long I remained so, I know not. The cold air revived me. I got upon my feet, procured a light and saw that I had killed my antagonist, who was stone dead. It's useless screaming, Lucille. In my horror and distraction, I hit upon the mad expedient of placing the body in a sack, bearing it forth in the dark night, and casting it into the Somme. I did so, amidst as I distinctly heard, the mocking laughter of demons—human devils they were not, or I should have been pursued. Ah! all is known, and I am lost!"

The entrance of a sergeant of the communal guard was simultaneous with this last exclamation of Paul Verdot. "Don't be alarmed, my friends," said the sergeant: "I have called upon a slight matter of form, nothing more. But upon my word, citoyen Verdot, that was a droll freak last night. There must have been an unusually large number of petit verres in that head of yours to have put such a fancy there. Shall I tell?" continued the merry functionary, shaking and jerking his head towards Lucille, as he offered Paul his snuff box.

"Yes—to be sure," stammered Paul, utterly confounded. What do you mean?"

"Figures-vous, citoyen," said the sergeant, blandly addressing Lucille, "this charming husband of yours, who is, however, not a bad fellow, let me admit par parenthese, coming home in such a state, you being absent, as we know, that upon finding, decently laid out upon this canepe, the dead body of—"

"Dead body? Grand Dieu!"

"Dead body, Parbleu! that of the proscrit Meudon; and as dead, I'll warrant, as Louis Capet—killed by a couple of bullets from the patriotic muskets of two of our armed citizens, who had started the aristocrat from his lair; which bullets, however, did not prevent him from crawling into and striving to conceal himself in your premises, citoyen Verdot, as if he knew them well," added the sergeant, with a certain air of menace, not, happily, difficult to mollify.

"Merci, citoyen," your health—dam! but this brandy is excellent? Another glass! Well, yes; as you say, the weather is bitterly cold this morning. Well, madame, as I was saying, what does your amiable husband do whilst we are gone to procure means of fetching the corpse, but come in, pop it into a sack, carry it off, and pitch it into the Somme! Did you ever hear of such a droll dog, eh? But, seriously, you will come to the Hotel de Ville, citoyen and sign the proces verbal, or there may be some difficulty in appropriating the reward, which is handsome. Be it so, madame, I cannot refuse a lady; though really, three glasses, one after the other is—no matter. Here is to our glorious Republic, one and indivisible! And, now, my friends, au revoir."

As the door closed, the husband and wife threw themselves with bursting souls into each other's outstretched arms; and Lucille, as soon as her choking utterance permitted, whispered, brokenly, "Never, never, Paul, shall there again be an unshared secret between us!"

DISGRACEFUL OUTRAGE.—A disgraceful outrage occurred at "Lake View House," last evening, the particulars of which we learn, were as follows: A party of Irishmen having been attending a funeral, proceeded afterwards to the above named house, and demanded something to drink. Being somewhat intoxicated and noisy, the proprietor who was sick sent word to the bar-keeper not to sell them any liquor, which was the signal for a riot, and an indiscriminate attack was made upon the house, and gentlemen who happened to be there at the time.

Mr. Henry Butler of this city, was felled by a blow over the head with a club and his thumb almost bitten off. Mr. T. O. Wilson was likewise severely hurt, and others of the party more or less injured. The house was also considerably damaged. We did not learn that any arrest had been made, or the leaders in the outrage identified.—Chicago Journal.

WESTWARD.—The Minnesota of the 18th, chronicles the arrival of the first one of Frink & Co's coaches in St. Paul. It is the pioneer of a line about to be established between Dubuque and the former city. In passing through the road was found to be better than had been anticipated, and houses enough were found but with slight difficulty to stop at over night!

The Daily Gazette.

JANESVILLE : : : WISCONSIN.
MONDAY MORNING, JULY 31, 1854.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.—During the tremendous storm of last Monday evening, a large number of telegraph poles on the line between White-water and Waukesha were prostrated and the wire broken in various places, thus rendering it impossible to obtain reports. In the absence of these, we compile from the Milwaukee papers such items as will be of most interest to our readers.

In the senate, the motion of Mr. Seward to take up the river and harbor bill, was agreed to, 35 to 14. Mr. Hunter reported back the navy appropriation bill.

In the house, Mr. Washburne from a special committee to investigate the alleged fraud in the Minnesota land bill, reported that the committee had nearly completed their labors, and he asked to be discharged, which was agreed to.

The reported prevalence of cholera at Niagara Falls, is now said to be confined to some Irish laborers on the canals in the borders of the village.

The yellow fever is prevailing extensively at Havana, there being over 300 cases on the 20th inst.

A dwelling house was burned at Springfield, Mass. on the 28th, and four females perished in the flames.

A desperate fight took place in Philadelphia on the night of the 27th, between two fire companies, in which three persons were dangerously and one mortally wounded. A German was shot through the thigh, and taken to the hospital. Another man was shot in the breast and the wound will probably be fatal. Several arrests had been made.

DAILY MAIL TO FOND DU LAC.—We are glad to learn that the post-master general, upon representations made to him by our members of congress, has re-considered his determination to reduce the mail service, between this city and Fond du Lac, to a tri-weekly mail, and has directed the mail to be sent daily as heretofore.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Now that one good thing has been done, or rather a bad thing righted, let our members of congress turn their attention to the route between Janesville and Madison, and give us a daily mail on that. We would commend the whole mail arrangements of the state to their notice, but we fear the dose would prove too strong for a single effort.

Throughout the hot weather of this hottest of summers, our city has remained remarkably healthy, but two deaths having occurred for some weeks. This for a place of 6000 inhabitants and in the unhealthiest part of the year, while cholera and various summer diseases are sweeping off hundreds in other places, is extraordinary, and fully illustrates the healthfulness of the location.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Wilson, living about three miles west of this city, had his leg badly cut by a reaper, Saturday morning. The fleshy part of the leg, below the knee was severed, leaving the bones and main artery bare. The wound was dressed by Dr. R. B. Treat.

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE.—The July number of this sterling monthly is received. With this number commences the thirty-ninth volume. The four Reviews in connection with which Blackwood is published, also commence new volumes with the July number, except the North British which commenced in May, and this is a most favorable time to subscribe. The postage on the whole is only eighty cents a year, viz: fourteen cents on each Review, and twenty-four cents on Blackwood. The subscription price for Blackwood alone is $3; with the four Reviews, $10.

PAPIER MACHE AND LEATHER WORK.—We have examined some specimens of this work, exhibited by Mrs. Osbourn, at the New England house, and must say that they are very beautiful. It is a most successful discovery for combining the useful with the ornamental, and ladies who learn the art can do much towards furnishing and beautifying their rooms at a slight cost of materials and with comparatively little labor. Ornamental stands, picture frames, window cornices and a variety of other articles to decorate and furnish the parlor or sitting room, may be made at a trifling cost in good imitation of highly-wrought carvings. The work is not simply ornamental; it is substantial and durable, and admits of less careful use than the more costly articles of common manufacture.—For a more full explanation of this beautiful art, we must invite our friends to call at the rooms of Mrs. Osbourn, where specimens may be seen and all needed information be supplied.

COMPLIMENTARY.—The honorary degree of B. A. was conferred on our fellow townsman, Geo. S. DODGE Esq. at the last commencement exercises of Racine College.

PUTNAM'S MONTHLY for August is received at Sutherland's. No one who is in the habit of reading it needs urging to go and buy it. It is the best American magazine published.

We learn that Dr. Ladd, late school superintendent of this state, died of cholera, at Shullsburg, a few days since.

A sweet little girl in New Haven, only three years old, was promised one evening that she should accompany her parents to Boston the next morning. She was much elated by the prospect of the journey, and when she had finished repeating her little prayer that night, she said with the most exquisite simplicity, "Good bye, God—good bye, Jesus Christ, I am going to Boston in the morning."

The New Orleans Bulletin adds, that it is not simply children, but grown people as well may feel that they may bid good-bye to all expectations of divine influence on going to Boston.

DISGRACEFUL ATTEMPT AT MURDER.—On Wednesday last week our streets were disgraced by one of the most diabolical outrages ever known to have taken place in open day light in any of our northern cities. Scenes of a somewhat similar character we sometimes hear or read of among the unprincipled slave holding population of the south, but during a residence of fifteen months in California in 1849 and '50, it was never our lot to witness so gross a violation of all laws, and disregard for the lives of fellow beings, as this which we are now compelled to record. The facts are briefly as follows:

The inciting cause, almost equal to the consecutive transaction, was the publication of a scandal or slander by means of printed slips or bills, which were freely scattered about and posted up in the streets during the previous Sunday night. These bills were supposed to reflect upon the fair character of a young lady, daughter of J. E. Arnold, of Milwaukee, who has been spending a short time with acquaintances in this city. This vile publication met with proper indignation from every lover of decency and order in the city, and had no further notice been taken of it, the midnight assassin upon the private character of individuals would have received his just deserts, as have all publishers, of slanders or retailers of scandal by the recoiling of their own vicious weapons upon themselves alone.

Immediately upon hearing of this alleged scandal upon his daughter's character, Mr. Arnold hastened to this city armed with one of Colt's patent revolvers and a raw-hide. He had his revolver carefully loaded with powder and balls after he arrived at the Planter's, and openly avowed his determination to inflict summary punishment with his own hand upon the individual whom he might believe to be the author or publisher of the said vile scandal. After making some fruitless enquiries he was referred to Mr. J. W. Crawford for evidence in the matter, and accordingly addressed him a note to call at the Planter's hotel. Mr. C. immediately obeyed the summons, and, without weapons, wholly unprepared to meet a blood-thirsty foe, armed expressly to take the life of a fellow being, without allowing him a moment's warning to offer a prayer to his Maker, or to repeat a farewell to an affectionate family, met Arnold in the Planter's sitting room. After a few words had passed Arnold drew forth his rawhide and struck Crawford, when Mr. C. overpowered Arnold, wrested the whip from him and repaid the cowardling. Arnold then attempted to draw his revolver from his pocket, upon which Crawford retreated into the street, but pursued by the former, who discharged his murderous weapon three several times at his retreating victim, each time being sufficiently near to have killed him instantly, had not Arnold been under the tremor of excitement and rage. Mr. Crawford fell at the third shot, but upon examination no mark of a bullet could be discovered, and his fortunate escape was considered almost a miracle. Arnold was brought before justice Mulberger and required to give bail for his appearance at the next term of the circuit court to answer the charge of assault with intent to kill.

The Register says: "If such a man as J. E. Arnold sets such an example, where can we expect to find respect for law and order? A drunk Indian could hardly have shown more contempt for the law of the land and the safety of the community."—Watertown Chronicle.

A FANCY MAN IN FEMALE APPAREL.—Immense numbers have occurred lately where females, actuated by a desire of vindicating the principle of women's rights, have seen fit to "put the breeches on," but we have rarely heard of a case where masculinity has thought proper to robe itself in petticoats. A curious instance of this kind was developed in this city on Thursday afternoon. Officer Goodwin saw a figure purporting to be that of a lady, coming out of a hair dressing establishment not very far distant from the head of Hanover street; and although a thick green veil was worn by the unknown, a glimpse of the profile satisfied him that the person was not what the outside appearance would seem to indicate. He accordingly followed the suspicious character up Washington street and through a half a dozen cross streets, observing his dress four times to avoid the observation of the "chase." At length having arrived at the corner of Gardner and Tremont streets, he accosted the stranger with "How do you do sir?" After some parley, the gentleman owned the deception, gave his name and residence, and begged to be let off. The mysterious character turned out to be a resident of a neighboring city, is a member of the church and belongs to the legal profession. He gave various reasons for his conduct, the most rational of which was that from youth up he had always had a fancy for wearing female apparel. Upon his arrival here, he put up at one of the most fashionable hotels, caused his name to be put on the register as Harriet Daniels, and completely deceived the landlord, attendant and guests, as to his sex. Upon visiting his room, the officers found two trunks, one of them containing half a dozen beautiful and costly lady's dresses, with all the necessary paraphernalia, jewels, trinkets, gewgaws, &c. The officers could not restrain their mirth as they overhauled the ribbons, laces, puff combs, corsets, bustles, artificial breastworks, fancy slippers, &c. Upon the representation of a gentleman who knew him, the officers were induced to release him the eccentric personage, thus depriving the police court gentry of a rich scene, the arrangement of a young man five feet three inches in height, for promenade the street in the open day, dressed as a fashionable belle.—Boston Mail.

IN A QUANDRY.—The Toledo Blade relates a capital incident which occurred the other day. The editor of the Blade fell in conversation with an individual who was formerly possessed of anti-slavery principles, whom he had not seen for some time. Says the Blade:

Knowing what his convictions formerly were, we talked freely with him on the present crisis in public affairs, and began to express our feelings relative to the high-handed course of Douglas, Cushing & Co. We perceived he was rather mum, and disposed to change the conversation. At last, with the blandest kind of expression, he remarked, "I'm in rather a delicate situation." Not understanding the exact extent of the delicacy, we were obliged to press him still further, when he replied, "I suppose you know I am postmaster of L—," a fact of which we were entirely ignorant. The post office is worth about twenty-seven dollars thirty-four and a half cents a year.

EMPHATIC.—A democratic convention was lately held at Columbus, Ind., to nominate a candidate for congress. Immense noise to adjourn was carried. The result was then announced by the chairman, Col. Lee:

"Gentlemen, I declare this convention adjourned, without a nomination, by G—d!"

ACCIDENT ON THE AURORA RAILROAD.—Yesterday morning the regular passenger train east on the Aurora road, came in collision with a freight train about a mile this side of the junction. The breaks were ordered down as soon as the freight train came in sight, and the passenger train brought to a stand still, but the other was heavily loaded, and came against the locomotive of the passenger train with fearful violence. Both engines were badly injured, but the passengers escaped unhurt.—Chi. Journal

THE DAILY GAZETTE.

Proceedings of the Common Council.

SATURDAY EVENING, July 29.

Present: The Mayor, and Aldermen Pixley, Gilvie, Pease, Dimock, Jackman, Howland, Clark, Williston, Millmore and Cobb.

The Mayor read a petition signed by A. W. Carter & Co., and others, in reference to a liquor saloon under the store of said Carter & Co., representing that said saloon was kept in a disorderly manner, and asking that the license of said saloon be revoked.

On motion of Ald. Pease, the petition was referred to the license committee, with instructions to report at the next meeting of the council.

An ordinance establishing the grade of High, Cherry and Academy streets, was introduced. Rules suspended and ordinance passed.

On motion of Ald. Millmore, amended by Ald. Pease, ordered that the bridge committee be instructed to report on the best manner of going on with and completing the upper bridge.

On motion of Ald. Dimock, William Macdonald was added as a member of the board of health.

An order was read by Ald. Pease in reference to the appointment by the county judge, of a jury for the opening of an alley, petitioned for by H. K. Whiton and others. Adopted.

The council then adjourned.

COLLISION ON THE GALENA ROAD.—The morning passenger train on the Galena road, yesterday came in collision with a locomotive and tender, between Danby and Babcock's grove. It appears that the engine of the single locomotive was running backwards towards Babcock's grove, and consequently was going at a rapid rate. The engine of the passenger train struck the other with such force as to toss it completely into the air. It fell off the track a complete wreck. The passenger locomotive was also so badly injured that it was necessary to send back to Chicago by a hand car, to procure another, and the passenger train which should have arrived here at 10 o'clock A. M., yesterday, was delayed until late in the afternoon. No one injured that we learn.—Chicago Journal.

THE HUDSON BAY COMPANY TO BE WOUND UP.—In accordance with instructions from the United States secretary of state, Gov. Stevens has addressed the Hudson Bay company, taking the ground that "their right to trade with the Indians in Washington territory is not recognized, and will not longer be allowed," and granting them until the 1st of July next to wind up their affairs.

THE "KNOW NOthings."—The following was pretty generally circulated in this city yesterday: A son of Erin, who has for some time been solicitous to know the whereabouts of the "Know Nothings" and has been "dodging" all about the city for the purpose of discovery, perceiving a light in the court house on Thursday evening, he at once concluded he had stumbled on the object of his search. Stealing a tip-toe, he drew near the door way, and cautiously entered. After listening awhile he withdrew again, highly gratified, and joining some companions, he imparted the important discovery he had made. "Och! sure," said he "they meet there every Thursday evening, and it is evident they know nothing, for devil a word do they say except in hieroglyphics." He had accidentally stumbled upon the city council while in session.—Louisville Democrat.

By comparing the resolutions of the state democratic convention of Wisconsin, five years ago, with the resolutions of the mass convention held lately at Madison, we find no substantial difference. The spirit, substance, and even the scope of the resolutions of both conventions are so nearly the same that one might suppose the authors of the first were the fathers of the other.—Grant. Co. Herald.

NEW PAPER AT BELLOIT.—We see it noticed that a subscription is on foot at Beloit to raise money to start a new paper at Beloit, Rock Co., of the Douglas and Nebraska stripe, and that about $1,000 had been subscribed—that this money so subscribed is to be used as a loan to the publishers at an interest of 10 per cent. per annum, upon good security, and this is thought will be a great inducement to editors and publishers to start such a paper. It certainly shows a good deal of liberality in those men to offer to loan money on security at 10 per cent! They must want a paper bad! Somebody will be liberal enough, no doubt, to rent a building on as good terms for an office, and at other for a dwelling if the publisher should need it, and all this in a county where there are already four papers besides an agricultural paper—in a county naturally whig and free soil, and the anti-Nebraska portion of the democratic party largely in the majority. A happy chance this! Won't somebody take it?—Elkhorn Reporter.

What do you drive such a pitiful looking carcass as that for? Why don't you put a heavy coat of flesh on him?

HOSPITAL BURN.—Last Sunday night, some person set fire to a building below town, which has been used by the city as a hospital for the sick. The mayor, by an advertisement, offers a reward of $200 for the apprehension of the miscreant who perpetrated the deed.—Galena Gaz., 22d.

AGAIN & AGAIN

THE BOSTON STORE.

Let the Horn be Blown!!

"Sound the loud trumpet o'er land and o'er sea,"

WHEELLOCK'S triumph, and ever shall be.

THIS is the middle of the nineteenth century, the first half of which has produced more change and onward movement than any fifty years of our Christian Era.

The great controlling power of this age is its commerce—indeed, this may be truly called the commercial age.

It has been well said by an ancient writer that "Man wants but little here below," and to supply those wants

WHEELLOCK

Announces to every people and every tongue, to both sexes and all parties to all factions of all gangs, that finding his old store entirely

TOO SMALL!

He has been compelled, in order to be able to supply the immense call for goods at his establishment, to Double the capacity of his Store Rooms!

Having purchased this spring, for this market, to be sold this season,

$39,007 00 Worth of Goods

But who can expect to read in the brief space of one life all the articles that the

BOSTON STORE CONTAINS.

Indeed, history must fail to give the searcher of knowledge any accurate idea of its immense

STOCK OF SUMMER GOODS,

His inimitable selection of Fancy Dress Goods!

He has over

10,000 Yards of Silk Barges, of every color and price, and it is with no great difficulty that the fair dealer of this fair valley can select,

FROM THE ONE THOUSAND PIECES,

Of all patterns and ranging in price from SIX CENTS Per Yard to Twenty-Eight Cents, such dresses as will add to their exquisite beauty, though it may as a general thing be as difficult to add that beauty as it is to add to the refinement of the fabric, or to add to the beauty of the color.

It must not be inferred that we offer only these and the many other articles for outer apparel, such as Chamois and Foulard Silks, but all manner of

are on hand, so that every one may be entirely accommodated with every article of female apparel.—Eved French red velvet Gaiters, do do do do

Ladies' Enamelled Boots, Enamelled sewed Congress Boots,

LADIES' MOROCCO POLKAS,

And all the articles manufactured of the best styles.—So that of this store, so far as articles which adorn La Belle sexe are concerned, it may be truly said

"CUSTOM cannot state the infinite variety."

While the Boston Store has made provision to display the feet, it can also boast that it has all sorts of

by which hands can be protected and retain

"The white wonder of fair Juliet's hand."

And in taking leave of those of whom it is no exaggeration to say they are

"Haven's last, best gift to man," the Nuptial benediction, the Paragon of perfection, Mr. Wheellock assures his fair customers that his assistants and auxiliaries are those who unite great knowledge of the business, fine personal presence and affability of manner to a determination to discharge conscientiously their several and respective duties; that while they may have the proper desire to effect sales, they will never in imitation of many of our contemporaries attempt to accomplish that object by equivocation, misrepresentation, exaggeration, tergiversation, fabrication, or by direct lying.

And now to the wants of the

COARSE-HAND SEX.

Mr. Wheellock has every kind of material to make those articles of dress that give to man his individuality—

PANTALOONS,

CALF "BEWTS," COW HIDE DO., GAZELLE, do., PATENT LEATHER DO., GIRAFFE do.,

HATS

That fit every head from the Websterian brow to the country politician's, from the size of caput of him who is closely shorn after the Hibernian fashion to that of him who wears the well-pomaded, ambrosialized, elongated Hyperion curls.

And to the spectator who buys to sell again,

The Boston Store

Can, at lower rates of usance than any other establishment west of the Alleghany mountains, furnish that exchange so rich to him who fills his pockets with water bills the sea. And to them we offer

DOMESTIC GLASSWARE, WORSTED,

Packet Handkerchiefs, Inkstands, Cotton Yarn,

Ready-made Vests, Ground Pepper, Flannels,

Looking Glasses, Ready-made Over Coats, Pants, Raincoats, Flat Irons and Cotton Batting, Lanterns,

Satchels, which the whining school-boy with shining morning face bears on his arm,

Chests, Norwegian Bannocks and Hair Trunks, Tea, Tobacco and Wicking.

In the

CROCKERY

Line may be found the BENNINGTON, the PARIAN and the LAVA Manufacture, Pitchers for milk or water, Tea Pots, Spittoons, Bowls for washing, for bread and milk, or sugar, Canisters, chamber pots, and Flower Pots, MAINE LIQUOR LAW VOLUMES and Lager Beer Mugs.

And in fine, the proprietor of this establishment can with all confidence assure those who have been in the habit of trading at Janesville that, although they have

"Often seen coming and going bold and bubble still, It o'erruns the deer."

They will find that the representations which shall be made to them by that proprietor or his clerks will not

Precisely one week from that day, Paul and Lucille were married; and a very happy, prosperous menage that, at Numero 13, Rue des Capucins, proved for a considerable time—adversity had greatly improved Madame Verdot, and from whom more kind, prudent, notable, industrious wife, could scarcely be. She was soon able to manage the business, and guide the house much better than her husband could pretend to do, and everybody said Paul had obtained a jewel of a partner. He thought so himself; the brightest and most precious in the world—but for one flaw therein, which, in his eyes, gradually overgrew and dimmed its radiance. Lucille was, he felt, a dissembler in one important particular; as least, the child whom he kept in such rigorous seclusion—always appearing restless and agitated if even he addressed a few words to her! What honest cause could there be for that? His grandmother's warning of the deceptive and impenetrable character of the Borlase family, consistently returned to his mind in spite of himself. Then the child, who appeared to be about six years of age, did not in the slightest degree resemble either of her reputed parents. They had both either complexion, and dark hair and eyes, whilst the young Lucille was a beautiful blonde, with finely chiselled patrician features—"Like," Paul would sometimes passionately murmur, "the haughty impress of himself with which a proud aristocrat might stamp with shame an honest family." Worse than all, it had come to Paul's knowledge that his wife had received several letters through a private channel, with respect to which she would only, when questioned, say they came from a relative of her daughter's, and did not in the slightest degree concern her. One else, certainly not her husband. All this had an evil effect upon Paul Verdot's habits. He began to frequent more than he ought to have done, a wine shop near the Pont Neuf, kept by one Bontemps, and this led of course to fresh altercations with his wife. One morning, after a late breakfast, during which he had listened in moody silence to his wife's earnest remonstrances upon his growing habits of intemperance, he raised his pale, almost haggard face, from the hands in which, it had been buried, and looking at her with something of sad sternness, said: "Lucille, when we married, I gave you everything; I do not mean alone my worldly substance—though that was considerable, and has been ever since, as you know, more yours than mine—I gave you all—my heart, my confidence, my every thought was and is open and plain to you. You cannot say the same, Lucille; and yet you must know it is the weight of the sacred secret you so jealously guard, that is sinking me in the abyss of low vice which I shudder from much as you do."

"What accursed secret? Surely——"

"The child!" cried Paul, starting to his feet, and addressing his wife with passionate and imploring voice and gesture. "Tell me in what way it is connected with you—who the mysterious correspondent of yours is; let me know the worst there be. I will bear anything for your sake, beloved Lucille—even shame—if you will but be frank and candid with your husband."

"Shame!" repeated the wife, rallying with the sting of the word. "How dare you address such a word to me? I will tell you nothing."

"Then I am a lost man!" exclaimed Paul; and seizing his hat he rushed out of the house, and in a few minutes was seated in the wine-shop. He was still there when evening fell, very early—for the month was January, and the weather unusually dark and cold—and had been drinking freely all day, when a message arrived from Madame Verdot who wished to speak with him without delay. Paul rose sullenly and followed the messenger home. The establishment he found was closed, the workpeople dismissed, and his wife dressed as if going out. She was very pale and seemingly excited, but her manner was unusually kind and caressing.

"Paul," she said, laying her hand on his arm as he fell into a chair, "I am going out—I and the child; a fiacre is waiting for us at the back gate, and I shall not probably return for several hours." The husband made no reply, and she went on: "I have given Jeannette leave to go home, and I hope therefore you will not go out again. And Paul," added the wife, kissing his forehead, "I feel I have been much to blame in having any concealments from you, and I promise you, that to-morrow you shall know all."

"To-morrow I shall know all, you promise?"

"I do, solemnly. And now good-bye for a while."

She went out, and presently Paul Verdot heard the smack of a whip and the sound of departing wheels from outside the back-yard entrance. He sat for a considerable time in a sort of confused, dozy dream, but the fire getting low, he roused himself, raked the embers together, threw on two or three fresh logs, and resealed himself, his wife's promise, as he described it, gradually warming his heart.

"I shall know all to-morrow," he audibly ejaculated, and as the words passed his lips, his eyes fell on the smouldering fragment of a letter, rendered visible in the far corner of the chimney-place by the renewed fire-light. To start up, seize it, and devour its contents as far as they could be discerned—for the fire had obliterated all but a few detached sentences—was the work of a moment. It was signed "Auguste;" and "chère Lucille" was implored not to lose a moment in coming with "our child" to Selis, a hamlet about a league from Amiens, on the northern road, and to bring "as much silver money" and "clothes" with her as possible, instant flight being imperative! The accursed words seemed to swim in fire before the frenzied gaze of the unfortunate man, and for a moment he was paralysed by the terrible discovery; for a moment only. "Infernal traitress!" he vociferated; "I know all too soon, and may reach you yet."—He then bounded up the stairs, found several bags of cash, which he knew were there in the morning, had been taken away, and that most of his wife's clothing were gone. There needed no further confirmation of the letter; and in five minutes Paul Verdot was on the road to Selis—armed.

It was about half-past eleven, according to Bontemps, when Paul Verdot returned to the wine shop. He was as white as a corpse, and there was a large swelling on his forehead as if he had received a severe blow, or had fallen down and struck himself heavily, which he said was the case. He told Bontemps that his wife would not return till the morning, and as there was nobody at home, not a servant even, he felt so lonely that he wished to sleep at his Bontemps house. This was acceded to, and he went to bed at once. Very early in the morning a message came from Madame Verdot, that her fiacre was ready, and her husband anxiously waited for Bontemps delivered the message himself to Paul, who stared while he spoke like a man in a dream, but said nothing, got up, dressed himself, and went home.

Paul Verdot, but for the strong shudder which passed over him as he encountered the surprised yet cheerful look of his wife, looked more like a stone image moving by automatic power than a living man. "Sit down, dear Paul," said Lucille, soothingly; "I have good news for thee. Ah! I see how it is," she added; "thou hast seen this piece of a letter which I found on the table. I dropped it last night, I suppose; and it has put wicked thoughts in that jealous pate of thine. Never mind; I am now going to explain everything; and satisfactorily, too, as thou wilt find."

"Brandy!" gasped the husband, faintly; "brandy!" It was given him; and his wife, though apparently much astonished, proceeded: "After all, mon frere, the explanation is a very simple one. The child was the daughter of the Comte and Comtesse Auguste de Vervay. They are proscrits, as you know; and the child was confided to me under a solemn promise never to divulge its name to a living soul, for fear of those Paris bloodhounds. The countess has been long confined to her bed with illness, so that they could not till lately leave the concealment they had found, to attempt escaping from the country. That peril is now, however, surmounted, and they are, I trust, beyond the reach of their persecutors. The letter was, of course, from the count; the clothes were required for the disguise of the countess, and the silver money was also essential; and see, mauvaise tete, here is the exchange I have made," added Lucille, who had a keen eye to the main chance, displaying with great glee, several jewels, evidently of great value.

The mental pallor of Paul Verdot's countenance had not been in the slightest degree diminished by his wife's revelation, to which he only faintly replied by saying, "Go on—go on. What more?"

"What more! Parbleu, that surely is enough. There is nothing else to say that I know of except that the Chevalier Meudon, a friend of the count's who has been living perdu, not far from the back of our premises, and who has frequently slept in the stable, unknown to you, when apprehensive he was beset, will, I fear, and it is difficult to get off, as the count informed me pursuers had obtained a hint of his hiding-place. I thought it possible he might have sought shelter here last night, and that was one reason I sent everybody away, and asked you to stop at home, who, I knew, would never betray a poor hunted fugitive. But, heavens, Paul, what is the matter? Help! help! My God, he is dying!"

He was not dying, but rapidly losing consciousness; which, however, a glass of brandy restored sufficiently to enable him to say, in a husky, rapid voice: "Listen, Lucille, and hear how your accused secret has destroyed me. I found that fragment of a letter, pursued you to Selis, and could nowhere find you there. I returned, crazed in mind, utterly crazed; for I swallowed brandy at every cabaret upon the road. I burst into this room, and, reclining upon the cannape there, saw the figure of a man asleep. In my frenzy I rushed at, grappled with him, and was grappled in return. A fierce, terrific conflict ensued. Several times I dashed him on the floor, and at last I received this blow upon the forehead, which rendered me insensible. How long I remained so, I know not."

The cold air revived me. I got upon my feet, procured a light and saw that I had killed my antagonist, who was stone dead. It's useless screaming, Lucille. In my horror and distraction, I hit upon the mad expedient of placing the body in a sack, bearing it forth in the dark night, and casting it into the Somme. I did so, amidst as I distinctly heard, the mocking laughter of demons—human devils they were not, or I should have been pursued. Ah! all is known, and I am lost!"

The entrance of a sergeant of the communal guard was simultaneous with this last exclamation of Paul Verdot. "Don't be alarmed, my friends," said the sergeant: "I have called upon a slight matter of form, nothing more. But upon my word, citoyen Verdot, that was a droll freak last night. There must have been an unusually large number of petit verres in that head of yours to have put such a fancy there. Shall I tell?" continued the merry functionary, winking, and jerking his head towards Lucille, as he offered Paul his snuff box.

"Yes—to be sure," stammered Paul, utterly confounded. What do you mean?"

"Figurez-vous citoyennne," said the sergeant, blandly addressing Lucille, "this charming husband of yours, who is, however, not a bad fellow, let me adjuir par parenthese, coming home in such a state, you being absent, as we know, that upon finding, decently laid out upon this canape, the dead body of—"

"Dead body? Grand Dieu!"

"Dead body, Parbleu! that of the proscrit Moudon; and as dead, I'll warrant, as Louis Capet,—killed by a couple of bullets from the patriotic muskets of two of our armed citizens, who had started the aristocrat from his lair; which bullets, however, did not prevent him from crawling into and striving to conceal himself in your premises, citoyen Verdot, as if he knew them well," added the sergeant, with a certain air of menace, not, happily, difficult to mollify.

"Merci citoyennne: your health—dam! but this brutality is excellent! Another glass! Well, yes; as you say, the weather is bitterly cold this morning. Well, madame, as I was saying, what does your amiable husband do whilst we are gone to procure means of fetching the corpse, but come in, pop it into a sack, carry it off, and pitch it into the Somme! Did you ever hear of such a droll dog, eh? But, seriously, you will come to the Hotel de Ville, citoyen and sign the procès verbal, or there may be some difficulty in appropriating the reward, which is handsome. Be it so, madame,—I cannot refuse a lady; though really, three glasses, one after the other is—no matter. Here is to our glorious Republic, one and indivisible! And, now, my friends, au revoir."

As the door closed, the husband and wife threw themselves with bustling sobts into each other's outstretched arms; and Lucille, as soon as her choking utterance permitted, whispered, brokenly, "Never, never, Paul, shall there again be an unshared secret between us!"

DISGRACEFUL OUTRAGE.—A disgraceful outrage occurred at "Lake View House," last evening, the particulars of which we learn, were as follows: A party of Irishmen having been attending a funeral, proceeded afterwards to the above named house, and demanded something to drink. Being somewhat intoxicated and noisy, the proprietor who was sick sent word to the bar keeper not to sell them any liquor, which was the signal for a riot, and an indiscriminate attack was made upon the house, and gentlemen who happened to be there at the time.

Mr. Henry Butler of this city, was felled by a blow over the head with a club and his thumb almost bitten off. Mr. T. O. Wilson was likewise severely hurt, and others of the party more or less injured. The house was also considerably damaged. We did not learn that any arrest had been made or the leaders in the outrage identified.—Chicago Journal.

WESTWARD.—The Missionsist of the 18th, chronicles the arrival of the first one of Frink & Co.'s coaches in St. Paul. It is the pioneer of a line about to be established between Duquette and the former city. In passing through the road, was found to be better than had been anticipated, and houses enough were found but with slight difficulty to stop at over night.

The Daily Gazette.

JANESVILLE : : : WISCONSIN.
MONDAY MORNING, JULY 31, 1854.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.—During the tremendous storm of last Monday evening, a large number of telegraph poles on the line between White-water and Waukesha were prostrated and the wire broken in various places, thus rendering it impossible to obtain reports. In the absence of these, we compile from the Milwaukee papers such items as will be of most interest to our readers.

In the senate, the motion of Mr. Seward to take up the river and harbor bill, was agreed to, 35 to 14. Mr. Hunter reported back the navy appropriation bill.

In the house, Mr. Washburne from a special committee to investigate the alleged fraud in the Minnesota land bill, reported that the committee had nearly completed their labors, and he asked to be discharged, which was agreed to.

The reported prevalence of cholera at Niagara Falls, is now said to be confined to some Irish laborers on the canals in the borders of the village.

The yellow fever is prevailing extensively at Havana, there being over 300 cases on the 20th inst.

A dwelling house was burned at Springfield, Mass. on the 28th, and four females perished in the flames.

A desperate fight took place in Philadelphia on the night of the 27th, between two fire companies, in which three persons were dangerously and one mortally wounded. A German was shot through the thigh, and taken to the hospital. Another man was shot in the breast and the wound will probably be fatal. Several arrests had been made.

DAILY MAIL TO FOND DU LAC.—We are glad to learn that the post-master general, upon representations made to him by our members of congress, has re-considered his determination to reduce the mail service, between this city and Fond du Lac, to a tri-weekly mail, and has directed the mail to be sent daily as heretofore. Milwaukee Sentinel.

Now that one good thing has been done, or rather a bad thing righted, let our members of congress turn their attention to the route between Janesville and Madison, and give us a daily mail on that. We would commend the whole mail arrangements of the state to their notice, but we fear the dose would prove too strong for a single effort.

Throughout the hot weather of this hottest of summers, our city has remained remarkably healthy, but two deaths having occurred for some weeks. This for a place of 6000 inhabitants and in the unhealthiest part of the year, while cholera and various summer diseases are sweeping off hundreds in other places, is extraordinary, and fully illustrates the healthfulness of the location.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Wilson, living about three miles west of this city, had his leg badly cut by a reaper, Saturday morning. The fleshy part of the leg, below the knee was severed, leaving the bones and main artery bare. The wound was dressed by Dr. R. B. Treat.

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE.—The July number of this sterling monthly is received. With this number commences the thirty-ninth volume. The four Reviews in connection with which Blackwood is published, also commence new volumes with the July number, except the North British which commenced in May, and this is a most favorable time to subscribe. The postage on the whole is only eighty cents a year, viz: fourteen cents on each Review, and twenty-four cents on Blackwood. The subscription price for Blackwood alone is $3; with the four Reviews, $10.

PAPER MACHE AND LEATHER WORK.—We have examined some specimens of this work, exhibited by Mrs. Osbourn, at the New England house, and must say that they are very beautiful. It is a most successful discovery for combining the useful with the ornamental, and ladies who learn the art can do much towards furnishing and beautifying their rooms at a slight cost of materials and with comparatively little labor. Ornamental stands, picture frames, window cornices and a variety of other articles to decorate and furnish the parlor or sitting room, may be made at a trifling cost in good imitation of highly-wrought carvings. The work is not simply ornamental; it is substantial and durable, and admits of less careful use than the more costly articles of common manufacture.—For a more full explanation of this beautiful art, we must invite our friends to call at the rooms of Mrs. Osbourn, where specimens may be seen and all needed information be supplied.

COMPLIMENTARY.—The honorary degree of B. A. was conferred on our fellow townsman, Geo. S. DODGE Esq. at the last commencement exercises of Racine College.

PETNAM'S MONTHLY for August is received at Sutherland's. No one who is in the habit of reading it needs urging to go and buy it. It is the best American magazine published.

We learn that Dr. Ladd, late school superintendent of this state, died of cholera, at Shullsburg, a few days since.

A sweet little girl in New Haven, only three years old, was promised one evening that she should accompany her parents to Boston the next morning. She was much elated by the prospect of the journey, and when she had finished repeating her little prayer that night, she said with the most exquisite simplicity, "Good bye, God—good bye, Jesus Christ,—I am going to Boston in the morning."

The New Orleans Bulletin adds, that it is not simply children, but grown people as well may feel that they may bid good-bye to all expectations of divine influence on going to Bector.

DISGRACEFUL ATTEMPT AT MURDER.—On Wednesday of last week our streets were disgraced by one of the most diabolical outrages ever known to have taken place in open day light in any of our northern cities. Scenes of a somewhat similar character we sometimes hear of read of among the unprincipled slave holding population of the south, but during a residence of fifteen months in California in 1849 and '50, it was never our lot to witness so gross a violation of all laws, and disregard for the lives of fellow beings, as this which we are now compelled to record. The facts are briefly as follows:

The inciting cause, almost equal to the consecutive transaction, was the publication of a scandal or slander by means of printed slips or bills, which were freely scattered about and posted up in the streets during the previous Sunday night. These bills were supposed to reflect upon the fair character of a young lady, daughter of J. E. Arnold, of Milwaukee, who, has been spending a short time with acquaintances in this city. This vile publication met with proper indignation from every lover of decency and order in the city, and had no further notice been taken of it, the midnight assassin upon the private character of individuals would have received his just deserts, as have all publisher, of libels or retailers of scandal by the recoiling of their own vicious weapons upon themselves alone.

Immediately upon hearing of this alleged scandal upon his daughter's character, Mr. Arnold hastened to this city armed with one of Colt's patent revolvers and a raw-hide. He had his revolver carefully loaded with powder and balls after he arrived at the Planter's, and openly avowed his determination to inflict summary punishment with his own hand upon the individual upon whom he might believe to be the author or publisher of the said slip of scandal. After making some fruitless enquiries he was referred to Mr. J. W. Crawford for evidence in the matter, and accordingly addressed him a note to call at the Planter's hotel. Mr. C. immediately obeyed the summons, and without weapons, wholly unprepared to meet a blood-thirsty foe, armed expressly to take the life of a fellow being, without allowing him a moment's warning to offer a prayer to his Maker, or to repeat a farewell to an affectionate family, met Arnold in the Planter's sitting room. After a few words had passed Arnold drew forth his rawhide and struck Crawford, when Mr. C. overpowered Arnold, wrested the whip from him and repaid the cowardling. Arnold then attempted to draw his revolver from his pocket, upon which Crawford retreated into the street, hotly pursued by the former, who discharged his murderous weapon three several times at his retreating victim, each time being sufficiently near to have killed him instantly, had not Arnold been under the tremor of excitement and rage. Mr. Crawford fell at the third shot, but upon examination no mark of a bullet could be discovered, and his fortunate escape was considered almost a miracle. Arnold was brought before justice Mulberger and required to give bail for his appearance at the next term of the circuit court to answer the charge of assault with intent to kill.

The Register says: "If such a man as J. E. Arnold acts such an example, where can we expect to find respect for law or order? A drunken Indian could hardly have shown more contempt for the law of the land and the safety of the community."—Waterloo Chronicle.

A FANCY MAN IN FEMALE APPAREL.—Innumerable instances have occurred lately where females, actuated by a desire of vindicting the principle of women's rights, have seen fit to "put the breeches on," but we have rarely heard of a case where masculinity has thought proper to robe itself in petticoats. A curious instance of this kind was developed in this city on Thursday afternoon. Officer Goodwin saw a figure purporting to be that of a lady, coming out of a hair dressing establishment not very far distant from the head of Hanover street; and although a thick green veil was worn by the unknown, a glimpse of the profile satisfied him that the person was not what the outside appearance would seem to indicate. He accordingly followed the suspicious character up Washington street and through a half a dozen cross streets, changing his dress four times to avoid the observation of the "chase." At length having arrived at the corner of Gardiner and Tremont streets, he accosted the stranger with "How do you do sir?" After some parley, the gentleman owned the deception, gave his name and residence, and begged to be let off. The mysterious character turned out to be a resident of a neighboring city, is a member of the church and belongs to his legal profession. He gave various reasons for his conduct, the most rational of which was that from youth up he had always had a fancy for wearing female apparel. Upon his arrival here, he put up at one of the most fashionable hotels, caused his name to be put on the register as Harriet Daniels, and completely deceived the landlord, attendant and guests, as to his sex. Upon visiting his room, the officers found two trunks, one of them containing half a dozen beautiful and costly lady's dresses, with all the necessary paraphernalia, jewels, trinkets, gewgaws, &c. The officers could not restrain their mirth as they overhauled the ribbons, laces, puff coats, corsets, bustles, artificial breastworks, fancy slippers, &c. Upon the representation of a gentleman who knew him, the officers were induced to release him the eccentric personage, thus depriving the police court of a very rich scene, the arrangement of a young man five feet three inches in height, for promenade the street in the open day, dressed as a fashionably belle.—Boston Mail.

IN A QUANDARY.—The Toledo Blade relates a capital incident which occurred the other day. The editor of the Blade fell in conversation with an individual who was formerly possessed of anti-slavery principles, whom he had not seen for some time. Says the Blade:

Knowing what his convictions formerly were, we talked freely with him on the present crisis in public affairs, and begun to express our feelings relative to the high-handed course of Douglas, Cushing & Co. We perceived he was rather mum, and disposed to change the conversation. At last, with the blandest kind of expression, he remarked, "I'm in rather a delicate situation." Not understanding the exact extent of the delicacy, we were obliged to press him still further, when he replied, "I suppose you know I am postmaster of L—," "a fact of which we were entirely ignorant. The post office is worth about twenty-seven dollars thirty-four and a half cents a year.

EMPHATIC.—A democratic convention was lately held at Columbus, Ind., to nominate a candidate for congress. Immense noise to adjourn was carried. The result was then announced by the chairman, Col Lee:

"Gentlemen, I declare this convention adjourned, without a nomination, by G—d!"

ACCIDENT ON THE AURORA RAILROAD.—Yesterday morning the regular passenger train east on the Aurora road, came in collision with a freight train about a mile this side of the junction. The breaks were ordered down as soon as the freight train came in sight, and the passenger train brought to a stand still, but the other was heavily loaded, and came against the locomotive of the passenger train with fearful violence. Both engines were badly injured, but the passengers were not hurt.

Precisely one week from that day, Paul and Lucille were married; and a very happy, prosperous ménage that at Numero 13, Rue des Capucins, proved for a considerable time—adversity had greatly improved Madame Verdot, than whom a more kind, prudent, notable, in domestic life, could scarcely be. She was soon able to manage the business, and guide the house much better than her husband could pretend to do, and everybody said Paul had obtained a jewel of a partner. He thought so himself; the brightest and most precious in the world—but for one flaw therein, which, in his eyes, gradually overgrew and dimmed its radiance. Lucille was, he felt, a dissembler in one important particular at least; the child whom she kept in such rigorous seclusion—always appearing restless and agitated if even he addressed a few words to her. His grandmother's warning of the deceptive and impenetrable character of the Bonaise family, constantly recurred to his mind in spite of himself. Then the child, who appeared to be about six years of age, did not in the slightest degree resemble either of her reputed parents. They had both olive complexions, and dark hair and eyes, whilst the young Lucille was a beautiful blonde, with finely chiselled patrician features—"Like," Paul would sometimes passionately murmur, "the haughty impress of himself with which a proud aristocrat might stamp with shame an honest family." Worse than all, it had come to Paul's knowledge that his wife had received several letters through a private channel, with respect to which she would only, when questioned, say they came from a relative of her daughter's, and did not in the slightest degree concern any one else, certainly not her husband. All this had an evil effect upon Paul Verdot's habits. He began to frequent much more than he ought to have done, a wine shop near the Pont Neuf, kept by one Bontemps, and this led of course to fresh altercations with his wife. One morning, after a late breakfast, during which he had listened in moody silence to his wife's earnest remonstrances upon his growing habits of intemperance, he raised his pale, almost haggard face, from the hands in which it had been buried, and looking at her with something of sad sternness, said: "Lucille, when we married, I gave you everything; I do not mean alone my worldly substance—though that was considerable, and has been ever since, as you know, more yours than mine—I gave you all—my heart, my confidence, my every thought was and is open and plain to you. You cannot say the same, Lucille; and yet you must know it is the weight of the accursed secret you so jealously guard, that is sinking me in the abyss of low vice which I abhor as much as you do."

"What accursed secret? Surely—"

"The child!" cried Paul, starting to his feet, and addressing his wife with passionate and imploring voice and gesture. "Tell me in what way it is connected with you—who the mysterious correspondent of yours is; let me know the worst there be. I will bear anything for your sake, beloved Lucille—even shame—if you will but be frank and candid with your husband."

"Shame!" repeated the wife, rallying with the sting of the word. "How dare you address such a word to me? I will tell you nothing."

"Then I am a lost man!" exclaimed Paul; and seizing his hat he rushed out of the house, and in a few minutes was seated in the wine shop. He was still there when evening fell, very early—for the month was January, and the weather unusually dark and cold—and had been drinking freely all day, when a message arrived from Madame Verdot who wished to speak with him without delay. Paul rose sullenly and followed the messenger home. The establishment he found was closed, the workpeople dismissed, and his wife dressed as if going out. She was very pale and seemingly excited, but her manner was unusually kind and caressing.

"Paul," she said, laying her hand on his arm as he fell into a chair, "I am going out—I and the child; a fiance is waiting for us at the back gate, and I shall not probably return for several hours." The husband made no reply, and she went on: "I have given Jeannette leave to go home, and I hope therefore you will not go out again. And Paul," added the wife, kissing his forehead, "I feel I have been much to blame in having any concealments from you, and I promise you, that to-morrow you shall know all."

"To-morrow I shall know all, you promise?"

"I do, solemnly. And now good-bye for a while."

She went out, and presently Paul Verdot heard the smack of a whip and the sound of departing wheels from outside the back-yard entrance. He sat for a considerable time in a sort of confused, dozy dream, but the fire getting low, he roused himself, raked the embers together, threw on two or three fresh logs, and resented himself, his wife's promise, as he described it, gradually warming his heart.

"I shall know all to-morrow," he audibly ejaculated, and as the words passed his lips, his eye fell on the smouldering fragment of a letter, rendered visible in the far corner of the chimney-place by the renewed fire-light. To start up, seize it, and devour its contents as far as they could be discerned—for the fire had obliterated all but a few detached sentences—was the work of a moment. It was signed "Auguste," and "chère Lucille" was implored not to lose a moment in coming with "our child" to Selis, a hamlet about a league from Amiens on the northern road, and to bring "as much silver money" and "clothes" with her as possible, instant flight being imperative! The accursed words seemed to swim in fire before the frenzied gaze of the unfortunate man, and for a moment he was paralyzed by the terrible discovery; for a moment only. "Infernal traitress!" he vociferated; "I know all to-night, and may reach you yet!" He then bounded up the stairs, found several bags of caus, which he knew were there in the morning, had been taken away, and that most of his wife's clothing were gone. There needed no further confirmation of the letter; and in five minutes Paul Verdot was on the road to Selis—armed.

It was about half-past eleven, according to Bontemps, when Paul Verdot returned to the wine shop. He was as white as a corpse, and there was a large swelling on his forehead as if he had received a violent blow, or had fallen down and struck himself heavily, which he said was the case. He told Bontemps that his wife would not return till the morning, and as there was nobody at home, not a servant even, he felt so lonely that he wished to sleep at his Bontemps' house. This was acceded to, and he went to bed at once. Very early in the morning a message came from Madame Verdot, that breakfast was ready, and her husband anxiously waited for. Bontemps delivered the message himself to Paul, who stared while he spoke like a man in a dream, but said nothing, got up, dressed himself, and went home.

Paul Verdot, but for the strong shudder which passed over him as he encountered the surprised yet cheerful look of his wife, looked more like a stone image moving by automatic power than a living man. "Sit down, dear Paul," said Lucille, soothingly; "I have good news for thee. Ah! I see how it is," she added; "thou hast seen this piece of a letter which I found on the table. I dropped it last night, I suppose; and it has put wicked thoughts in that jealous pair of thine. Never mind, I am now going to explain everything, and satisfactorily, too, as thou wilt find."

"Brandy!" gasped the husband, faintly; "brandy!" It was given him; and his wife, though apparently much astonished, proceeded: "After all, ma foi, the explanation is a very simple one. The child was the daughter of the Comte and Countess Auguste de Vervay. They are proscrits, as you know; and the child was confided to me under a solemn promise never to divulge its name to a living soul, for fear of those Paris bloodhounds. The countess has been long confined to her bed with illness, so that they could not till lately leave the concealment they had found, to attempt escaping from the country. That peril is now, however, surmounted, and there are, I trust, beyond the reach of their persecutors. The letter was, of course, from the count; the clothes were required for the disguise of the countess, and the silver money was also essential; and see, mauvaise tête, here is the exchange I have made," added Lucille, who had a keen eye to the main chance, displaying with great glee, several jewels, evidently of great value.

The mental pallor of Paul Verdot's countenance had not been in the slightest degree diminished by his wife's revelation, to which he only faintly replied by saying, "Go on—go on. What more?"

"What more! Parbleu, that surely is enough. There is nothing else to say that I know of, except that the Chevalier Moudon, a friend of the count's who has been living perdu, not far from the back of our premises, and who has frequently slept in the stable, unknown to you, when apprehensive he was beset, will, I fear, find it difficult to get off, as the count informed me pursuers had obtained a hint of his hiding-place. I thought it possible he might have sought shelter here last night, and that was one reason I sent everybody away, and asked you to stop at home, who, I knew, would never betray a poor hunted fugitive. But, heavens, Paul, what is the matter? Help! help! My God, he is dying!"

It was not dying, but rapidly losing consciousness; which, however, a glass of brandy restored sufficiently to enable him to say, in a husky, rapid voice: "Listen, Lucille, and hear how your accursed secret has destroyed me. I found that fragment of a letter, pursued you to Selis, and could nowhere find you there. I returned, crazed in mind, utterly crazed; for I swallowed brandy at every cubit upon the road. I burst into this room, and, reclining upon the cannape there, saw the figure of a man asleep. In my frenzy I rushed at, grappled with him, and was grappled in return. A fierce, terrific conflict ensued. Several times I dashed him on the floor, and at last I received this blow upon the forehead, which rendered me insensible. How long I remained so, I know not. The cold air revived me. I got upon my feet, procured a light and saw that I had killed my antagonist, who was stone dead. It's useless screaming, Lucille. In my horror and distraction, I hit upon the mad expedient of placing the body in a sack, bearing it forth in the dark night, and casting it into the Somme. I did so, amidst as I distinctly heard, the mocking laughter of demons—human devils they were not, or I should have been pursued. Ah! all is known, and I am lost!"

The entrance of a sergeant of the communal guard was simultaneous with this last exclamation of Paul Verdot. "Don't be alarmed, my friends," said the sergeant: "I have called upon a slight matter of form, nothing more. But upon my word, citoyen Verdot, that was a droll freak last night. There must have been an unusually large number of petit verres in that head of yours to have put such a fancy there. Shall I tell?" continued the merry functionary, winking, and jerking his head towards Lucille, as he offered Paul his snuff box.

"Yes—to be sure," stammered Paul, utterly confounded. What do you mean?"

"Signer-vous citoyen," said the sergeant, blandly addressing Lucille, "this charming husband of yours, who is, however, not a bad fellow, let me admit par parenthese, coming home in such a state, you being absent, as we know, that upon finding, recently laid out upon this cannape, the dead body of—"

"Dead body? Grand Dieu!"

"Dead body, Parbleu! that of the proscrit Moudon; and as dead, I'll warrant, as Louis Capet,—killed by a couple of bullets from the patriotic muskets of two of our armed citizens, who had started the aristocrat from his lair; which bullets, however, did not prevent him from crawling into and striving to conceal himself in your premises, citoyen Verdot, as if he knew them well," added the sergeant, with a certain air of menace, not, happily, difficult to mollify.

"Merci citoyen; your health—dame! but this brandy is excellent! Another glass! Well, yes; as you say, the weather is bitterly cold this morning. Well, madame, as I was saying, what does your amiable husband do whilst we are gone to procure means of fetching the corpse, but come in, pop it into a sack, carry it off, and pitch it into the Somme! Did you ever hear of such a droll dog, eh? But, seriously, you will come to the Hotel de Ville, citoyen and sign the proves verbal, or there may be some difficulty in appropriating the reward, which is handsome. Be it so, madame,—I cannot refuse a lady; though really, three glasses, one after the other is—no matter. Here is our glorious Republic, one and indivisible! And, now, my friends, adieu."

As the door closed, the husband and wife threw themselves with bustling sobs into each other's outstretched arms; and Lucille, as soon as her choking utterance permitted, whispered, brokenly, "Never, never, Paul, shall there again be an unshared secret between us!"

DISGRACEFUL OUTRAGE.—A disgraceful outrage occurred at "Lake View House," last evening, the particulars of which we learn, were as follows: A party of Irishmen having been attending a funeral, proceeded afterwards to the above named house, and demanded something to drink. Being somewhat intoxicated and noisy, the proprietor who was sick sent word to the bar-keeper not to sell them any liquor, which was the signal for a riot, and an indiscriminate attack was made upon the house, and gentlemen who happened to be there at the time.

Mr. Henry Butler of this city, was felled by a blow over the head with a club and his thumb almost bitten off. Mr. T. O. Wilson was likewise severely hurt, and others of the party more or less injured. The house was also considerably damaged. We did not learn that any arrest had been made, or the leaders in the outrage identified.—Chicago Journal.

WESTWARD.—The Minnesota of the 18th, chronicles the arrival of the first one of Frink & Co's coaches in St. Paul. It is the pioneer of a line about to be established between Duquette and the former city. In passing through the road was found to be better than had been anticipated, and houses enough were found but with slight difficulty to stop at over night.

The Daily Gazette.

JANESVILLE : : : WISCONSIN.
MONDAY MORNING, JULY 31, 1851.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.—During the tremendous storm of last Monday evening, a large number of telegraph poles on the line between White-water and Waukesha were prostrated and the wire broken in various places, thus rendering it impossible to obtain reports. In the absence of these, we compile from the Milwaukee papers, such items as will be of most interest to our readers.

In the senate, the motion of Mr. Seward to take up the river and harbor bill, was agreed to, 35 to 14. Mr. Hunter reported back the navy appropriation bill.

In the house, Mr. Washburne from a special committee to investigate the alleged fraud in the Minnesota land bill, reported that the committee had nearly completed their labors, and he asked to be discharged, which was agreed to.

The reported prevalence of cholera at Niagara Falls, is now said to be confined to some Irish laborers on the canals in the borders of the village.

The yellow fever is prevailing extensively at Havana, there being over 300 cases on the 20th inst.

A dwelling house was burned at Springfield, Mass, on the 28th, and four females perished in the flames.

A desperate fight took place in Philadelphia on the night of the 27th, between two fire companies, in which three persons were dangerously and one mortally wounded. A German was shot through the thigh, and taken to the hospital. Another man was shot in the breast and the wound will probably be fatal. Several arrests had been made.

DAILY MAIL TO FOND DU LAC.—We are glad to learn that the post-master general, upon representations made to him by our members of congress, has re-considered his determination to reduce the mail service, between this city and Fond du Lac, to a tri-weekly mail, and has directed the mail to be sent daily as heretofore.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Now that one good thing has been done, or rather a bad thing righted, let our members of congress turn their attention to the route between Janesville and Madison, and give us a daily mail on that. We would commend the whole mail arrangements of the state to their notice, but we fear the dose would prove too strong for a single effort.

Throughout the hot weather of this hottest of summers, our city has remained remarkably healthy, but two deaths having occurred for some weeks. This for a place of 6000 inhabitants and in the unhealthiest part of the year, while cholera and various summer diseases are sweeping off hundreds in other places, is extraordinary, and fully illustrates the healthfulness of the location.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Wilson, living about three miles west of this city, had his leg badly cut by a reaper, Saturday morning. The fleshy part of the leg, below the knee was severed, leaving the bones and main artery bare. The wound was dressed by Dr. R. B. Treat.

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE.—The July number of this sterling monthly is received. With this number commences the thirty-ninth volume. The four Reviews in connection with which Blackwood is published, also commence new volumes with the July number, except the North British which commenced in May, and this is an most favorable time to subscribe. The postage on the whole is only eighty cents a year, viz: fourteen cents on each Review, and twenty-four cents on Blackwood. The subscription price for Blackwood alone is $3; with the four Reviews, $10.

PAPIER MACHE AND LEATHER WORK.—We have examined some specimens of this work, exhibited by Mrs. Osbourn, at the New England house, and must say that they are very beautiful. It is a most successful discovery for combining the useful with the ornamental, and ladies who learn the art can do much towards furnishing and beautifying their rooms at a slight cost of materials and with comparatively little labor. Ornamental stands, picture frames, window cornices and a variety of other articles to decorate and furnish the parlor or sitting room, may be made at a trifling cost in good imitation of highly-wrought carvings. The work is not simply ornamental; it is substantial and durable, and admits of less careful use than the more costly articles of common manufacture.—For a more full explanation of this beautiful art, we must invite our friends to call at the rooms of Mrs. Osbourn, where specimens may be seen and all needed information be supplied.

COMPLIMENTARY.—The honorary degree of B. A. was conferred on our fellow townsman, Geo. S. Dodge Esq. at the last commencement exercises of Racine College.

PUTNAM'S MONTHLY for August is received at Sutherland's. No one who is in the habit of reading it needs urging to go and buy it. It is the best American magazine published.

We learn that Dr. Ladd, late school superintendent of this state, died of cholera, at Shullsburg, a few days since.

A sweet little girl in New Haven, only three years old, was promised one evening that she should accompany her parents to Boston the next morning. She was much elated by the prospect of the journey, and when she had finished repeating her little prayer that night, she said with the most exquisite simplicity, "Good bye, God—good bye, Jesus Christ—I am going to Boston in the morning."

The New Orleans Bulletin adds, that it is not simply children, but grown people as well, expect that they may bid good-bye to all expectations of divine influence on going to Boston.

DISGRACEFUL ATTEMPT AT MURDER.—On Wednesday last week our streets were disgraced by one of the most diabolical outrages ever known to have taken place in open day light in any of our northern cities. Scenes of a somewhat similar character we sometimes hear or read of among the unprincipled slave holding population of the south, but during a residence of fifteen months in California in 1849 and '50, it was never our lot to witness so gross a violation of all laws, and disregard for the lives of fellow beings, as this which we now record to record. The facts are as briefly as follows: The inciting cause, almost equal to the consecutive transaction, was the publication of a scandal or slander by means of printed slips or bills, which were freely scattered about and posted up in the streets during the previous Sunday night. These bills were supposed to reflect upon the fair character of a young lady, daughter of J. B. Arnold, of Milwaukee, who has been spending a short time with acquaintances in this city. This vile publication met with proper indignation from every lover of decency and order in the city, and had no longer notice been taken of it, the midnight assassin upon the private character of individuals would have received his just deserts, as have all publishers of slanders or retailers of scandal by the recoiling of their own vicious weapons upon themselves alone.

Immediately upon hearing of this alleged scandal upon his daughter's character, Mr. Arnold hastened to this city armed with one of Colt's patent revolvers and a raw-hide. He had his revolver carefully loaded with powder and balls after he arrived at the Planter's, and openly avowed his determination to inflict summary punishment with his own hand upon the individual whom he might believe to be the author or publisher of the said vile scandal. After making some fruitless enquiries he was referred to Mr. J. W. Crawford for evidence in the matter, and accordingly addressed him a note to call at the Planter's hotel. Mr. C. immediately obeyed the summons, and without weapons, wholly unprepared to meet a blood-thirsty foe, armed expressly to take the life of a fellow being, without allowing him a moment's warning to offer a prayer to his Maker, or to repeat a farewell to an affectionate family, met Arnold in the Planter's sitting room. After a few words had passed Arnold drew forth his raw-hide and struck Crawford, when Mr. C. overpowered Arnold, wrested the whip from him and repaid the cowardling. Arnold then attempted to draw his revolver from his pocket, upon which Crawford retreated into the street hotly pursued by the former, who discharged his murderous weapon three several times at his retreating victim, each time being sufficiently near to have killed him instantly, had not Arnold been under the tremor of excitement and rage. Mr. Crawford fell at the third shot, but upon examination no mark of a bullet could be discovered, and his fortunate escape was considered almost a miracle. Arnold was brought before justice Mulberger and required to give bail for his appearance at the next term of the circuit court to answer the charge of assault with intent to kill.

The Register says: "If such a man as J. B. Arnold sets such an example, where can we expect to find respect for law or order? A drunken Indian could hardly have shown more contempt for the law of the land and the safety of the community."—Waterloo Chronicle.

A FANCY MAN IN FEMALE APPAREL.—Immense instances have occurred lately where females, actuated by a desire of vindicating the principle of women's rights, have seen fit to "put the breeches on," but we have rarely heard of a case where masculinity has thought proper to robe itself in petticoats. A curious instance of this kind was developed in this city on Thursday afternoon. Officer Goodwin saw a figure purporting to be that of a lady, coming out of a hair dressing establishment not very far distant from the head of Hanover street; and although a thick green veil was worn by the unknown, a glimpse of the profile satisfied him that the person was not what the outside appearance would seem to indicate. He accordingly followed the suspicious character up Washington street and through a half a dozen cross streets, changing his dress four times to avoid the observation of the "chase." At length having arrived at the corner of Gardiner and Tremont streets, he accosted the stranger with "How do you do sir?" After some parley, the gentleman owned the deception, gave his name and residence, and begged to be let off. The mysterious character turned out to be a resident of a neighboring city, is a member of the church and belongs to the legal profession. He gave various reasons for his conduct, the most rational of which was that from youth up he had always had a fancy for wearing female apparel. Upon his arrival here, he put up at one of the most fashionable hotels, caused his name to be put on the register as Harriet Daniels, and completely deceived the landlord, attendant and guests, as to his sex. Upon visiting his room, the officers found two trunks, one of them containing half a dozen beautiful and costly lady's dresses, with all the necessary paraphernalia, jewels, trinkets, gawgaws, &c. The officers could not restrain their mirth as they overhauled the ribbons, laces, puff combs, corsets, bustles, artificial braastworks, fancy slippers, &c. Upon the representation of a gentleman who knew him, the officers were induced to release him the eccentric personage, thus depriving the police court of a young man five feet three inches in height, for promenade the street in the open day, dressed as a fashionable belle.—Boston Mail.

IN A QUADRANT.—The Toledo Blade relates a capital incident which occurred the other day. The editor of the Blade fell in conversation with an individual who was formerly possessed of anti-slavery principles, whom he had not seen for some time. Says the Blade: "Knowing what his convictions formerly were, we talked freely with him on the present crisis in public affairs, and began to express our feelings relative to the high-handed course of Douglas, Cushing & Co. We perceived he was rather mum, and disposed to change the conversation. At last, with the blindest kind of expression, he remarked, 'I'm in rather a delicate situation.' Not understanding the exact extent of the delicacy, we were obliged to press him still further, when he replied, 'I suppose you know I am postmaster of L—,' a fact of which we were entirely ignorant. The post office is worth about twenty-seven dollars thirty-four and a half cents a year."

EMPHATIC.—A democratic convention was lately held at Columbus, Ind., to nominate a candidate for congress. Immense noise to adjourn was carried. The result was then announced by the chairman, Col. Lee: "Gentlemen, I declare this convention adjourned, without a nomination, by G—d!"

ACCIDENT ON THE AURORA RAILROAD.—Yesterday morning the regular passenger train east on the Aurora road, came in collision with a freight train about a mile this side of the junction. The breaks were ordered down as soon as the freight train came in sight, and the passenger train brought to a stand still, but the latter was heavily loaded, and came against the locomotive of the passenger train with fearful violence. Both engines were badly injured, but the passengers escaped unhurt.—Chi. Journal.

From Blackwood's Magazine.

Precisely one week from that day, Paul and Lucille were married; and a very happy, prosperous marriage that at Numero 18, Rue des Capuchins, proved for a considerable time—adversity had greatly improved Madame Verdot, than whom a more kind, prudent, notable, industrious wife could scarcely be. She was soon able to manage the business, and guide the house much better than her husband could pretend to do, and everybody said Paul had obtained a jewel of a partner. He thought so himself; the brightest and most precious in the world—but for one flaw therein, which, in his eyes, gradually overgrew and dimmed its radiance. Lucille was, he felt, a dissimulator in one important particular at least; the child whom she kept in such rigorous seclusion—always appearing restless and agitated if even he addressed a few words to her? What honest cause could there be for that? His grandmother's warning of the deceptive and impenetrable character of the Borlase family, constantly returned to his mind in spite of himself. Then the child, who appeared to be about six years of age, did not in the slightest degree resemble either of her reputed parents. They had both olive complexions, and dark hair and eyes, whilst the young Lucille was a beautiful blonde, with finely chiselled patrician features—"Like," Paul would sometimes passionately murmur, "the haughty impress of himself with which a proud aristocrat might stamp with shame an honest family." Worse than all, it had come to Paul's knowledge that his wife had received several letters through a private channel, with respect to which he would only, when questioned, say that he came from a relative of her daughter's, or one else, certainly not her husband. All this had an evil effect upon Paul Verdot's habits. He began to frequent much more than he ought to have done, a wine shop near the Pont Neuf, kept by one Bontemps, and this led of course to fresh altercations with his wife. One morning, after a late breakfast, during which he had listened in moody silence to his wife's earnest remonstrances upon his growing habits of intemperance, he raised his pale, almost haggard face, from the hands in which it had been buried, and looking at her with something of sad sternness, said: "Lucille, when we married, I gave you everything; I do not mean alone my worldly substance—though that was considerable, and has been ever since, as you know, more yours than mine—I gave you all my heart, my confidence, my every thought was and is open and plain to you. You cannot say the same, Lucille; and yet you must know it is the weight of the accused secret you so jealously guard, that is sinking me in the abyss of low vice which I abhor as much as you do."

"What accused secret? Surely—"
"The child!" cried Paul, starting to his feet, and addressing his wife with passionate and imploring voice and gesture. "Tell me in what way it is connected with you; who the mysterious correspondent of yours is; let me know the worst there be. I will bear anything for your sake, beloved Lucille—even shame—if you will but be frank and candid with your husband."

"Shame!" repeated the wife, rallying with the sting of the word. "How dare you address such a word to me? I will tell you nothing."
"Then I am a lost man!" exclaimed Paul; and in a few minutes was seated in the wine shop. He was still there when evening fell, very early for the month was January, and the weather unusually dark and cold—and had been drinking freely all day, when a messenger arrived from Madame Verdot who wished to speak with him without delay. Paul rose sullenly and followed the messenger home. The establishment he found was closed, the workpeople dismissed, and his wife dressed as if going out. She was very pale and seemingly excited, but her manner was unusually kind and caressing.

"Paul," she said, laying her hand on his arm as he fell into a chair. "I am going out—and the child; a fiacre is waiting for us at the back gate, and I shall not probably return for several hours." The husband made no reply, and she went on: "I have given Jeannette leave to go home, and I hope therefore you will not go out again. And Paul," added the wife, kissing his forehead, "I feel I have been much to blame in having any concealments from you, and I promise you, that to-morrow you shall know all."

"To-morrow I shall know all, you promise?"
"I do, solemnly. And now good-by for a while."

She went out, and presently Paul Verdot heard the smack of a whip and the sound of departing wheels from outside the back-yard entrance. He sat for a considerable time in a sort of confused, dozy dream, but the fire getting low, he roused himself, raked the embers together, threw on two or three fresh logs, and re-seated himself, his wife's promise, as he described it, gradually warming his heart.

"I shall know all to-morrow," he audibly ejaculated, and as the words passed his lips, his eye fell on the smouldering fragment of a letter, rendered visible in the far corner of the chimney-place by the renewed fire-light. To start up, seize it, and devour its contents as far as they could be discerned—for the fire had obliterated all but a few detached sentences—was the work of a moment. It was signed "Auguste;" and "chère Lucille" was implored not to lose a moment in coming with "our child" to Selis, a hamlet about a league from Amiens, on the northern road, and to bring "as much silver money" and "clothes" with her as possible, instant flight being imperative! The accused words seemed to swim in fire before the frenzied gaze of the unfortunate man, and for a moment he was paralysed by the terrible discovery; for a moment only. "Infernal traitress!" he vociferated; "I know all too soon, and may reach you yet." He then bounded up the stairs, found several bags of caus, which he knew were there in the morning, had been taken away, and that most of his wife's clothing were gone. There needed no further confirmation of the letter; and in five minutes Paul Verdot was on the road to Selis—armed.

It was about half-past eleven, according to Bontemps, when Paul Verdot returned to the wine shop. He was as white as a corpse, and there was a large swelling on his forehead, as if he had received a violent blow, or had fallen down and struck himself heavily, which he said was the case. He told Bontemps that his wife would not return till the morning, and as there was nobody at home, not a servant even, he felt so lonely that he wished to sleep at his Bontemps, house. This was acceded to, and he went to bed at once. Very early in the morning a message came from Madame Verdot, that breakfast was ready, and her husband anxiously waited for. Bontemps delivered the message himself to Paul, who stared while he spoke like a man in a dream, but said nothing, got up, dressed himself, and went home.

Paul Verdot, but for the strong shudder which passed over him as he encountered the surprised yet cheerful look of his wife, looked more like a stone image moving by automatic power than a living man. "Sit down, dear Paul," said Lucille, soothingly; "I have good news for thee. Ah! I see how it is," she added; "thou hast seen this piece of a letter, which I found on the table. I dropped it last night, I suppose; and it has put wicked thoughts in that jealous pate of thine. Never mind, I am now going to explain everything, and satisfactorily, too, as thou wilt find."

"Brandy!" gasped the husband, faintly; "brandy!" It was given him; and his wife, though apparently much astonished, proceeded: "After all, ma foi, the explanation is a very simple one. The child was the daughter of the Comte and Countess Auguste de Vervay. They are proscrits, as you know; and the child was confided to me under a solemn promise never to divulge its name to a living soul, for fear of those Paris bloodhounds. The countess has been long confined to her bed with illness, so that they could not till lately leave the concealment they had found, to attempt escaping from the country. That peril is now, however, surmounted, and they are, I trust, beyond the reach of their persecutors. The letter was, of course, from the count; the clothes were required for the disguise of the countess, and the silver money was also essential; and see, mauvaise tête, here is the exchange I have made," added Lucille, who had a keen eye to the main chance, displaying with great glee, several jewels, evidently of great value.

The mental pallor of Paul Verdot's countenance had not been in the slightest degree diminished by his wife's revelation, to which he only faintly replied by saying, "Go on—go on. What more?"

"What more! Parbleu, that surely is enough. There is nothing else to say that I know of, except that the Chevalier Meudon, a friend of the count's who has been living perdu, not far from the back of our premises, and who has frequently slept in the stable, unknown to us, when apprehensive he was beset, will, I fear, find it difficult to get off, as the count informed me pursuers had obtained a hint of his hiding-place. I thought it possible he might have sought shelter here last night, and that was one reason I sent everybody away, and asked you to stop at home, who, I knew, would never betray a poor hunted fugitive. But, heavens, Paul, what is the matter? Help! help! My God, he is dying!"

He was not dying, but rapidly losing consciousness; which, however, a glass of brandy restored sufficiently to enable him to say, in a husky, rapid voice: "Listen, Lucille, and hear how your accused secret has destroyed me. I found that fragment of a letter, pursued you to Selis, and could nowhere find you there. I returned, crazed in mind, utterly crazed; for I swallowed brandy at every cabaret upon the road. I burst into this room, and, reclining upon the canapé there, saw the figure of a man asleep. In my frenzy I rushed at, grappled with him, and was grappled in return. A fierce, terrific conflict ensued. Several times I dashed him on the floor, and at last I received this blow upon the forehead, which rendered me insensible. How long I remained so, I know not. The cold air revived me. I got upon my feet, procured a light and saw that I had killed my antagonist, who was stone dead. It's useless screaming, Lucille. In my horror and distraction, I hit upon the mad expedient of placing the body in a sack, bearing it forth in the dark night, and casting it into the Somme. I did so, amidst a I distinctly heard, the mocking laughter of demons—human devils they were not, or I should have been pursued. Ah! I am known, and I am lost!"

The entrance of a sergeant of the communal guard was simultaneous with this last exclamation of Paul Verdot. "Don't be alarmed, my friends," said the sergeant: "I have called upon a slight matter of form, nothing more. But upon my word, citoyen Verdot, that was a dreadful deed last night. There must have been an unusually large number of petit verres in that head of yours to have put such a fancy there. Shall I tell?" continued the merry functionary, winking, and jerking his head towards Lucille, as he offered Paul his snuff box.

"Yes—to be sure," stammered Paul, utterly confounded. "What do you mean?"
"Fighting citoyen Verdot," said the sergeant, blandly addressing Lucille; "this charming husband of yours, who is, however, not a bad fellow, let me admit par parenthese, coming home in such a state, you being absent, as we know, there upon finding, decently laid out upon this canapé, the dead body of—"
"Dead body? Grand Dieu!"

"Dead body, Parbleu! that of the proscrit Meudon; and as dead, I'll warrant, as Louis Capet—killed by a couple of bullets from the patriotic muskets of two of our armed citizens, who had started the aristocrat from his lair; which bullets, however, did not prevent him from crawling into and striving to conceal himself in your premises, citoyen Verdot, as if he knew them well," added the sergeant, with a certain air of menace, not, happily, difficult to mollify.

"Merci citoyenne; your health—dame! but this brandy is excellent! Another glass! Well, yes; as you say, the weather is bitterly cold this morning. Well, madame, as I was saying, what does your amiable husband do whilst we are gone to procure means of fetching the corpse, but come in, pop it into a sack, carry it off, and pitch it into the Somme! Did you ever hear of such a droll dog, eh? But, seriously, you will come to the Hotel de Ville, citoyen, and sign the process verbal, or there may be some difficulty in appropriating the reward, which is handsome. Be it so, madame, I cannot refuse a lady; though really, three glasses, one after the other is no matter. Here is to our glorious Republic, one and indivisible! And, now, my friends, adieu!"

As the door closed, the husband and wife threw themselves with bursting sob into each other's outstretched arms; and Lucille, as soon as her choking utterance permitted, whispered, brokenly, "Never, never, Paul, shall there again be an unshared secret between us!"

DISGRACEFUL OUTRAGE.—A disgraceful outrage occurred at "Lake View House," last evening, the particulars of which we learn, were as follows: A party of Irishmen having been attending a funeral, proceeded afterwards to the above named house, and demanded something to drink. Being somewhat intoxicated and noisy, the proprietor who was sick sent word to the bar-keeper not to sell them any liquor, which was the signal for a riot, and an indiscriminate attack was made upon the house, and gentlemen who happened to be there at the time.

Mr. Henry Butler of this city, was felled by a blow over the head with a club and his thumb almost bitten off. Mr. T. O. Wilson was likewise severely hurt, and others of the party more or less injured. The house was also considerably damaged. We did not learn that any arrest had been made or the leaders in the outrage identified.—Chicago Journal.

WESTWARD.—The Minnesota of the 18th, chronicles the arrival of the first one of Frink & Co's coaches in St. Paul. It is the pioneer of a line about to be established between Dubuque and the former city. In passing through the road was found to be better than had been anticipated, and houses enough were found but with slight difficulty to stop at over night!

The Daily Gazette.

JANESVILLE : : : WISCONSIN.
MONDAY MORNING, JULY 31, 1854.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.—During the tremendous storm of last Monday evening, a large number of telegraph poles on the line between Milwaukee and Waukesha were prostrated and the wire broken in various places, thus rendering it impossible to obtain reports. In the absence of these, we compile from the Milwaukee papers such items as will be of most interest to our readers.

In the senate, the motion of Mr. Seward to take up the river and harbor bill, was agreed to, $5 to 14. Mr. Hunter reported back the navy appropriation bill.

In the house, Mr. Washburne from a special committee to investigate the alleged fraud in the Minnesota land bill, reported that the committee had nearly completed their labors, and he asked to be discharged, which was agreed to.

The reported prevalence of cholera at Niagara Falls, is now said to be confined to some Irish laborers on the canals in the borders of the village.

The yellow fever is prevailing extensively at Havana, there being over 300 cases on the 20th inst.

A dwelling house was burned at Springfield, Mass, on the 28th, and four females perished in the flames.

A desperate fight took place in Philadelphia on the night of the 27th, between two fire companies, in which three persons were dangerously and one mortally wounded. A German was shot through the thigh, and taken to the hospital. Another man was shot in the breast and the wound will probably be fatal. Several arrests had been made.

DAILY MAIL TO FOND DU LAC.—We are glad to learn that the post-master general, upon representations made to him by our members of congress, has re-considered his determination to reduce the mail service, between this city and Fond du Lac, to a tri-weekly mail, and has directed the mail to be sent daily as heretofore.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Now that one good thing has been done, or rather a bad thing righted, let our members of congress turn their attention to the route between Janesville and Madison, and give us a daily mail on that. We would commend the whole mail arrangements of the state to their notice, but we fear the dose would prove too strong for a single effort.

Throughout the hot weather of this hottest of summers, our city has remained remarkably healthy, but two deaths having occurred for some weeks. This for a place of 6000 inhabitants and in the unhealthiest part of the year, while cholera and various summer diseases are sweeping off hundreds in other places, is extraordinary, and fully illustrates the healthfulness of the location.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Wilson, living about three miles west of this city, had his leg badly cut by a reaper, Saturday morning. The fleshy part of the leg, below the knee was severed, leaving the bones and main artery bare. The wound was dressed by Dr. R. B. Treat.

BLACKWOOD'S ENTERTAINING MAGAZINE.—The July number of this sterling monthly is received. With this number commences the thirty-ninth volume. The four Reviews in connection with which Blackwood is published, also commence new volumes with the July number, except the North British which commenced in May, and this is a most favorable time to subscribe. The postage on the whole is only eighty cents a year, viz: fourteen cents on each Review, and twenty-four cents on Blackwood. The subscription price for Blackwood alone is $3; with the four Reviews, $10.

PAPIER MACHE AND LEATHER WORK.—We have examined some specimens of this work, exhibited by Mrs. Osbourn, at the New England house, and must say that they are very beautiful. It is a most successful discovery for combining the useful with the ornamental, and ladies who learn the art can do much towards furnishing and beautifying their rooms at a slight cost of materials and with comparatively little labor. Ornamental stands, picture frames, window cornices and a variety of other articles to decorate and furnish the parlor or sitting room, may be made at a trifling cost in good imitation of highly-wrought carvings. The work is not simply ornamental; it is substantial and durable, and admits of less careful use than the more costly articles of common manufacture.—For a more full explanation of this beautiful art, we must invite our friends to call at the rooms of Mrs. Osbourn, where specimens may be seen and all needed information be supplied.

COMPLIMENTARY.—The honorary degree of B. A. was conferred on our fellow townsman, Geo. S. Dodge Esq. at the last commencement exercises of Racine College.

POTNAM'S MONTHLY for August is received at Sutherland's. No one who is in the habit of reading it needs urging to go and buy it. It is the best American magazine published.

WE learn that Dr. Ladd, late school superintendent of this state, died of cholera, at Shullsburg, a few days since.

A sweet little girl in New Haven, only three years old, was promised one evening that she should accompany her parents to Boston the next morning. She was much elated by the prospect of the journey, and when she had finished repeating her little prayer that night, said to her mother, "Good night, I am going to Boston in the morning."

The New Orleans Bulletin adds, that it is not simply children, but grown people as well may feel that they may bid good-bye to all expectations of divine influence on going to Boston.

DISGRACEFUL ATTEMPT AT MURDER.—On Wednesday of last week our streets were disgraced by one of the most diabolical outrages ever known to have taken place in open day light in any of our northern cities. Scenes of a somewhat similar character we sometimes hear of read of among the unprincipled slave holding population of the south, but during a residence of fifteen months in California in 1849 and '50, it was never our lot to witness so gross a violation of all laws, and disregard for the lives of fellow beings, as this which we are now compelled to record. The facts are briefly as follows:

The inciting cause, almost equal to the consecutive transaction, was the publication of a scandal or slander by means of printed slips or bills, which were freely scattered about and posted up in the streets during the previous Sunday night. These bills were supposed to reflect upon the fair character of a young lady, daughter of J. E. Arnold, of Milwaukee, who has been spending a short time with acquaintances in this city. This vile publication met with proper indignation from every lover of decency and order in the city, and had no further notice been taken of it, the midnight assassin upon the private character of individuals would have received his just deserts, as have all publishers of seditious or scandalous bills, or the receding of their own vicious weapons upon themselves alone.

Immediately upon hearing of this alleged scandal upon his daughter's character, Mr. Arnold hastened to this city armed with one of Colt's patent revolvers and a raw-hide. He had his revolver carefully loaded with powder and balls after he arrived at the Planter's, and openly avowed his determination to inflict summary punishment with his own hand upon the individual whom he might believe to be the author or publisher of the said slip of scandal. After making some fruitless enquiries he was referred to Mr. J. W. Crawford for evidence in the matter, and accordingly addressed him a note to call at the Planter's hotel. Mr. C. immediately obeyed the summons, and without weapons, wholly unprepared to meet a blood-thirsty foe, armed expressly to take the life of a fellow being, without allowing him a moment's warning to offer a prayer to his Maker, or to repeat a farewell to an affectionate family, met Arnold in the Planter's sitting room. After a few words had passed Arnold drew forth his rawhide and struck Crawford, when Mr. C. overpowered Arnold, wrested the whip from him and repaid the cowardly Arnold then tempted to draw his revolver from his pocket, upon which Crawford retreated into the street.

He was pursued by the former, who discharged his murderous weapon three several times at his retreating victim, each time being sufficiently near to have killed him instantly, had not Arnold been under the tremor of excitement and rage. Mr. Crawford fell at the third shot, but upon examination no mark of a bullet could be discovered, and his fortunate escape was considered a miracle. Arnold was brought before justice Mulberger and required to give bail for his appearance at the next term of the circuit court to answer the charge of assault with intent to kill.

The Register says: "If such a man as J. E. Arnold sets such an example, where can we expect to find respect for law or order? A drunken Indian could hardly have shown more contempt for the law of the land and the safety of the community."—Watertown Chronicle.

A FANCY MAN IN FEMALE APPAREL.—Immense numbers have occurred lately where females, actuated by a desire of vindicating the principle of women's rights, have seen fit to "put the breeches on," but we have rarely heard of a case where masculinity has thought proper to take itself in petticoats. A curious instance of this kind was developed in this city on Thursday afternoon. Officer Goodwin saw a figure purporting to be that of a lady, coming out of a hair dressing establishment not very far distant from the head of Milwaukee street; and although a thick green veil was worn by the unknown, a glimpse of the profile satisfied him that the person was not what the outside appearance would seem to indicate. He accordingly followed the suspicious character up Washington street and through a half a dozen cross streets, changing his dress four times to avoid the observation of the "chase." At length having arrived at the corner of Gardner and Tremont streets, he accosted the stranger with "How do you do sir?" After some parley, the gentleman owned the deception, gave his name and residence, and begged to be let off. The mysterious character turned out to be a resident of a neighboring city, is a member of the church and belongs to the legal profession. He gave various reasons for his conduct, the most rational of which was that from youth up he had always had a fancy for wearing female apparel. Upon his arrival here, he put up at one of the most fashionable hotels, caused his name to be put on the register as Harriet Daniels, and completely deceived the landlord, attendant and guests, as to his sex. Upon visiting his room, the officers found two trunks, one of them containing half a dozen beautiful and costly lady's dresses, with all the necessary paraphernalia, jewels, trinkets, gewgaws, &c. The officers could not restrain their mirth as they overhauled the ribbons, laces, puff combs, corsets, bustles, artificial breastworks, fancy slippers, &c. Upon the representation of a gentleman who knew him, the officers were induced to release him the eccentric personage, thus depriving the police court of a rich scene, the arraignment of a young man five feet three inches in height, for promenadeing the street in the open day, dressed as a fashionable belle.—Boston Mail.

IN A QUADRANT.—The Toledo Blade relates a capital incident which occurred the other day. The editor of the Blade fell in conversation with an individual who was formerly possessed of anti-slavery principles, whom he had not seen for some time. Says the Blade: "Knowing what his convictions formerly were, we talked freely with him on the present crisis in public affairs, and began to express our feelings relative to the high-handed course of Douglas, Cushing & Co. We perceived he was rather mum, and disposed to change the conversation. At last, with the blindest kind of expression, he remarked, 'I'm in rather a delicate situation.' Not understanding the exact extent of the delicacy, we were obliged to press him still further, when he replied, 'I suppose you know I am postmaster of L—,' a fact of which we were entirely ignorant. The post office is worth about twenty-seven dollars thirty-four and a half cents a year."

EMPHATIC.—A democratic convention was lately held at Columbus, Ind., to nominate a candidate for congress. Immense noise to adjourn was carried. The result was then announced by the chairman, Col. Lee: "Gentlemen, I declare this convention adjourned, without a nomination, by G—d!"

ACCIDENT ON THE AURORA RAILROAD.—Yesterday morning the regular passenger train east on the Aurora road, came in collision with a freight train about a mile this side of the junction. The breaks were ordered down as soon as the freight train came in sight, and the passenger train brought to a stand still, but the other was heavily loaded, and came against the locomotive of the passenger train with fearful violence. Both engines were badly injured, but the passengers escaped unhurt.—Chi. Journal.

And such a lot of Hosiery, I know cannot be beat,
And Gloves a great variety, they are so very neat;
Just now, when Spring is coming, and every thing looks bright,
For a glove to suit the season, the color should be light.
There are other Goods for Ladies, of which they ought to know.
That I keep in these blue boxes, and am always pleased to show.
Such as Blouse and Linen Edging, Cotton and Cambric, Muslin and Cambric Needlework, and Gimps of every hue.
Those Underclothes and Chemisettes I almost had forgot.
And Ladies' Needlework Collars, so beautifully wrought,
With Bishop Lavins and Cambrics, and Muslins fine

And Lace to make old Ladies' Caps and trim them off complete.
And to parry Sol's "director rays," I've Parasols to sell.
Of every kind and color, they please the Ladies well—
And Umbrellas cheap for Gents, or so at least they may.
For lots of them get carried off, on every rainy day.
Such lots of Combs for the million, of every sort and kind,
To puff or curl, or plait the hair, no better can you find.
And every kind of Buttons for dresses, coats and vests.
To sell by the gross or dozen—they are the very best.
And for Gentlemen and Little Boys I have Fashionable
Hats,

And every other kind, of Summer Goods that's right
To make up into coats and pantalons and vests—
As large a stock as any, that ever was brought West.

and that that may be meant, as oft, when least is said,
In view of this, I'll close my bill, and here invite you all,
Whenever you come to Janesville, be sure and give me a call.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Precisely one week from that day, Paul and Lucille were married; and a very happy, prosperous marriage that at Numero 13, Rue des Capucines, proved for a considerable time—adversity had greatly improved Madame Verdot, than whom a more kind, prudent, notable, industrious wife, could scarcely be. She was soon able to manage the business, and guide the house much better than her husband could pretend to do, and everybody said Paul had obtained a jewel of a partner. He thought so himself; the brightest and most precious in the world—but for one flaw therein, which, in his eyes, gradually overgrew and dimmed its radiance. Lucille was, he felt, a dissembler in one important particular at least; the child whom she kept in such rigorous seclusion—always appearing restless and agitated if even he addressed a few words to her! What honest cause could there be for that? His grandmother's warning of the deceptive and impenetrable character of the Borlase family, constantly recurred to his mind in spite of himself. Then the child, who appeared to be about six years of age, did not in the slightest degree resemble either of her reputed parents. They had both olive complexions, and dark hair and eyes, whilst the young Lucille was a beautiful blonde, with finely chiselled patrician features—"Like," Paul would sometimes passionately murmur, "the haughty impress of himself with which a proud aristocrat might stamp with shame an honest family." Worse than all, it had come to Paul's knowledge that his wife had received several letters through a private channel, with respect to which she would only, when questioned, say they came from a relative of her daughter's, and did not in the slightest degree concern any one else, certainly not her husband. All this had an evil effect upon Paul Verdot's habits. He began to frequent much more than he ought to have done, a wine shop near the Pont Neuf, kept by one Bontemps, and this led of course to fresh altercations with his wife. One morning, after a late breakfast, during which he had listened in moody silence to his wife's earnest remonstrances upon his growing habits of intemperance, he roused his pale, almost laggard face, from the hands in which it had been buried, and looking at her with something of sad sternness, said: "Lucille, when we married, I gave you everything; I do not mean alone my worldly substance—though that was considerable, and has been ever since, as you know, more yours than mine—I gave you all—my heart, my confidence, my every thought was and is open and plain to you. You cannot say the same, Lucille; and yet you must know it is the weight of the accursed secret you so jealously guard, that is sinking me in the abyss of low vice which I abhor as much as you do."

"What accursed secret? Surely—"

"The child!" cried Paul, starting to his feet, and addressing his wife with passionate and imploring voice and gesture. "Tell me in what way it is connected with you—who the mysterious correspondent of yours is; let me know the worst there be. I will bear anything for your sake, beloved Lucille—even shame—if you will but be frank and candid with your husband."

"Shame!" repeated the wife, rallying with the sting of the word. "How dare you address such a word to me? I will tell you nothing."

"Then I am a lost man!" exclaimed Paul; and seizing his hat he rushed out of the house, and in a few minutes was seated in the wine shop. He was still there when evening fell, very early—for the month was January, and the weather unusually dark and cold—and had been drinking freely all day, when a message arrived from Madame Verdot who wished to speak with him without delay. Paul rose sullenly and followed the messenger home. The establishment he found was closed, the workpeople dismissed, and his wife dressed as if going out. She was very pale and seemingly excited, but her manner was unusually kind and caressing.

"Paul," she said, laying her hand on his arm as he fell into a chair, "I am going out—I and the child; figurez-vous I am waiting for us at the back gate, and I shall not probably return for several hours." The husband made no reply, and she went on: "I have given Jeannette leave to go home, and I hope therefore you will not go out again. And Paul," added the wife, kissing his forehead, "I feel I have been much to blame in having any concealments from you, and I promise you, that to-morrow you shall know all."

"To-morrow I shall know all, you promise?"

"I do, solemnly. And now good-bye for a while."

She went out, and presently Paul Verdot heard the smack of a whip and the sound of departing wheels from outside the back-yard entrance. He sat for a considerable time in a sort of confused, dozy dream, but the fire-glint low, he roused himself, raked the embers together, threw on two or three fresh logs, and resumed himself, his wife's promise, as he described it, gradually warming his heart.

"I shall know all to-morrow," he audibly ejaculated, and as the words passed his lips, his eye fell on the smouldering fragment of a letter, rendered visible in the far corner of the chimney-place by the renewed fire-light. To start up, seize it, and devour its contents as far as they could be discerned—for the fire had obliterated all but a few detached sentences—was the work of a moment. It was signed "Auguste," and "chere Lucille" was implored not to lose a moment in coming with "our child" to Selis, a hamlet about a league from Amiens, on the northern road, and to bring "as much silver money" and "clothes" with her as possible, instant flight being imperative! The accursed words seemed to swim in fire before the frenzied gaze of the unfortunate man, and for a moment he was paralysed by the terrible discovery; for a moment only. "Infernal traitress!" he vociferated; "I know all to-night, and may reach you yet!" He then bounded up the stairs, found several bags of ecus, which he knew were there in the morning, had been taken away, and that most of his wife's clothing were gone. There needed no further confirmation of the letter; and in five minutes Paul Verdot was on the road to Selis—armed.

It was about half-past eleven, according to Bontemps, when Paul Verdot returned to the wine shop. He was as white as a corpse, and there was a large swelling on his forehead as if he had received a violent blow, or had fallen down and struck himself heavily, which he said was the case. He told Bontemps that his wife would not return till the morning, and as there was nobody at home, not a servant even, he felt so lonely that he wished to sleep at his Bontemps, house. This was acceded to, and he went to bed at once. Very early in the morning a message came from Madame Verdot, that breakfast was ready, and her husband anxiously waited for. Bontemps delivered the message himself to Paul, who stared while he spoke like a man in a dream, but said nothing, got up, dressed himself, and went home.

Paul Verdot, but for the strong shudder which passed over him as he encountered the surprised yet cheerful look of his wife, looked more like a stone image moving by automatic power than a living man. "Sit down, dear Paul," said Lucille, "soothingly." "I have good news for thee. Ah! I see how it is," she added; "thou hast seen this piece of a letter which I found on the table. I dropped it last night, I suppose; and it has put wicked thoughts in that jealous pair of thine. Never mind, I am now going to explain everything, and satisfactorily, too, as thou wilt find."

"Brandy!" gasped the husband, faintly; "brandy!" It was given him; and his wife, though apparently much astonished, proceeded: "After all, mon foi, the explanation is a very simple one. The child was the daughter of the Comte and Countess Auguste de Vervay. They are proscrits, as you know; and the child was confided to me under a solemn promise never to divulge its name to a living soul, for fear of those Paris bloodhounds. The countess has been long confined to her bed with illness, so that they could not till lately leave the concealment they had found, to attempt escaping from the country. That peril is now, however, surmounted, and they are, I trust, beyond the reach of their persecutors. The letter was, of course, from the count; the clothes were required for the disguise of the countess, and the silver money was also essential; and see, mauvaise tete, here is the exchange I have made," added Lucille, who had a keen eye to the main chance, displaying with great glee, several jewels, evidently of great value.

The mental pallor of Paul Verdot's countenance had not been in the slightest degree diminished by his wife's revelation, to which he only faintly replied by saying, "Go on—go on. What more?"

"What more! Parbleu, that surely is enough. There is nothing else to say that I know of, except that the Chevalier Meudon, a friend of the count's who has been living perdu, not far from the back of our premises, and who has frequently slept in the stable, unknown to you, when apprehensive he was beset, will, I fear, find it difficult to get off, as the count informed me pursuers had obtained a hint of his hiding-place. I thought it possible he might have sought shelter here last night, and that was one reason I sent everybody away, and asked you to stop at home, who, I knew, would never betray a poor hunted fugitive. But, heavens, Paul, what is the matter? Help! help! My God, he is dying!"

He was not dying, but rapidly losing consciousness; which, however, a glass of brandy restored sufficiently to enable him to say, in a husky, rapid voice: "Listen, Lucille, and hear how your accursed secret has destroyed me. I found that fragment of a letter, pursued you to Selis, and could nowhere find you there. I returned, crazed in mind, utterly crazed; for I swallowed brandy at every cabaret upon the road. I burst into this room, and, reclining upon the cannape there, saw the figure of a man asleep. In my frenzy I rushed at, grappled with him, and was grappled in return. A fierce, terrific conflict ensued. Several times I dashed him on the floor, and at last I received this blow upon the forehead, which rendered me insensible. How long I remained so, I know not. The cold air revived me. I got upon my feet, procured a light and saw that I had killed my antagonist, who was stone dead. It's useless screaming, Lucille. In my horror and distraction, I hit upon the mad expedient of placing the body in a sack, bearing it forth in the dark night, and casting it into the Somme. I did so, amidst as I distinctly heard, the mocking laughter of demons—human devils they were not, or I should have been pursued. Ah! all is known, and I am lost!"

The entrance of a sergeant of the communal guard was simultaneous with this last exclamation of Paul Verdot. "Don't be alarmed, my friends," said the sergeant: "I have called upon a slight matter of form, nothing more. But upon my word, citoyen Verdot, that was a droll freak last night. There must have been an unusually large number of petit verres in that head of yours to have put such a fancy there. Shall I tell?" continued the merry functionary, winking, and jerking his head towards Lucille, as he offered Paul his snuff box.

"Yes—to be sure," stammered Paul, utterly confounded. "What do you mean?"

"Figurez-vous citoyen," said the sergeant, blandly addressing Lucille, "this charming husband of yours, who is, however, not a bad fellow, let me admit par parenthese, coming home in such a state, your being absent, as we know, that upon finding, decently laid out upon this cannape, the dead body of—"

"Dead body? Grand Dieu!"

"Dead body? Parbleu! that of the proscrit Meudon; and as dead, I'll warrant, as Louis Capet,—killed by a couple of bullets from the patriotic muskets of two of our armed citizens, who had started the aristocrat from his lair; which bullets, however, did not prevent him from crawling into and striving to conceal himself in your premises, citoyen Verdot, as if he knew them well," added the sergeant, with a certain air of menace, not, happily, difficult to mollify.

"Merci citoyen! your health—chant! but this brandy is excellent? Another glass! Well, yes; as you say, the weather is bitterly cold this morning. Well, madame, as I was saying, what does your amiable husband do whilst we are gone to procure means of fetching the corpse, but come in, pop it into a sack, carry it off, and pitch it into the Somme! Did you ever hear of such a droll dog, eh? But, serious—if you will come to the Hotel de Ville, citoyen and sign the proces verbal, or there may be some difficulty in appropriating the reward, which is handsome. Be it so, madame,—I cannot refuse a lady; though really, three glasses, one after the other is—no matter. Here is to our glorious Republic, one and indivisible! And, now, my friends, au revoir."

As the door closed, the husband and wife threw themselves with bursting sobs into each other's outstretched arms; and Lucille, as soon as her choking utterance permitted, whispered, brokenly, "Never, never, Paul, shall there again be an unshared secret between us!"

DISGRACEFUL OUTRAGE.—A disgraceful outrage occurred at "Lake View House," last evening, the particulars of which we learn, were as follows: A party of Irishmen having been attending a funeral, proceeded afterwards to the above named house, and demanded something to drink. Being somewhat intoxicated and noisy, the proprietor who was sick sent word to the bar-keeper not to sell them any liquor, which was the signal for a riot, and an indiscriminate attack was made upon the house, and gentlemen who happened to be there at the time.

Mr. Henry Butler of this city, was felled by a blow over the head with a club and his thumb almost bitten off. Mr. T. O. Wilson was likewise severely hurt, and others of the party more or less injured. The house was also considerably damaged. We did not learn that any arrest had been made or the leaders in the outrage identified.—Chicago Journal.

WESTWARD.—The Minnesotan of the 18th, chronicles the arrival of the first one of Frink & Co.'s coaches in St. Paul. It is the pioneer of a line about to be established between Dubuque and the former city. In passing through the road was found to be better than had been anticipated, and houses enough were found but with slight difficulty to stop at over night!

The Daily Gazette.
JANESVILLE : : : : WISCONSIN.
MONDAY MORNING, JULY 31, 1851.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.—During the tremendous storm of last Monday evening, a large number of telegraph poles on the line between White-water and Waukesha were prostrated and the wire broken in various places, thus rendering it impossible to obtain reports. In the absence of these, we compile from the Milwaukee papers such items as will be of most interest to our readers.

In the senate, the motion of Mr. Seward to take up the river and harbor bill, was agreed to, 35 to 14. Mr. Hunter reported back the navy appropriation bill.

In the house, Mr. Washburne from a special committee to investigate the alleged fraud in the Minnesota land bill, reported that the committee had nearly completed their labors, and he asked to be discharged, which was agreed to.

The reported prevalence of cholera at Niagara Falls, is now said to be confined to some Irish laborers on the canals in the borders of the village.

The yellow fever is prevailing extensively at Havana, there being over 300 cases on the 20th inst.

A dwelling house was burned at Springfield, Mass, on the 28th, and four females perished in the flames.

A desperate fight took place in Philadelphia on the night of the 27th, between two fire companies, in which three persons were dangerously and one mortally wounded. A German was shot through the thigh, and taken to the hospital. Another man was shot in the breast and the wound will probably be fatal. Several arrests had been made.

DAILY MAIL TO FOND DU LAC.—We are glad to learn that the post-master general, upon representations made to him by our members of congress, has re-considered his determination to reduce the mail service, between this city and Fond du Lac, to a tri-weekly mail, and has directed the mail to be sent daily as heretofore.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Now that one good thing has been done, or rather a bad thing righted, let our members of congress turn their attention to the route between Janesville and Madison, and give us a daily mail on that. We would commend the whole mail arrangements of the state to their notice, but we fear the dose would prove too strong for a single effort.

Throughout the hot weather of this hottest of summers, our city has remained remarkably healthy, but two deaths having occurred for some weeks. This for a place of 6000 inhabitants and in the unhealthiest part of the year, while cholera and various summer diseases are sweeping off hundreds in other places, is extraordinary, and fully illustrates the healthfulness of the location.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Wilson, living about three miles west of this city, had his leg badly cut by a reaper, Saturday morning. The fleshy part of the leg, below the knee was severed, leaving the bones and main artery bare. The wound was dressed by Dr. B. B. Treat.

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE.—The July number of this sterling monthly is received. With this number commences the thirty-ninth volume. The four Reviews in connection with which Blackwood is published, also commence new volumes with the July number, except the North British which commenced in May, and this is a most favorable time to subscribe. The postage on the whole is only eighty cents a year, viz: fourteen cents on each Review, and twenty-four cents on Blackwood. The subscription price for Blackwood alone is $5; with the four Reviews, $10.

PAPIER MACHE AND LEATHER WORK.—We have examined some specimens of this work, exhibited by Mrs. Osbourn, at the New England house, and must say that they are very beautiful. It is a most successful discovery for combining the useful with the ornamental, and ladies who learn the art can do much towards furnishing and beautifying their rooms at a slight cost of materials and with comparatively little labor. Ornamental stands, picture frames, window cornices and a variety of other articles to decorate and furnish the parlor or sitting room, may be made at a trifling cost in good imitation of highly-wrought carvings. The work is not simply ornamental; it is substantial and durable, and admits of less careful use than the more costly articles of common manufacture.—For a more full explanation of this beautiful art, we must invite our friends to call at the rooms of Mrs. Osbourn, where specimens may be seen and all needed information be supplied.

COMPLIMENTARY.—The honorary degree of B. A. was conferred on our fellow townsman, Geo. S. Dodge Esq. at the last commencement exercises of Racine College.

PETNAM'S MONTHLY for August is received at Sutherland's. No one who is in the habit of reading it needs urging to go and buy it. It is the best American magazine published.

We learn that Dr. Ladd, late school superintendent of this state, died of cholera, at Shullsburgh, a few days since.

A sweet little girl in New Haven, only three years old, was promised one evening that she should accompany her parents to Boston the next morning. She was much elated by the prospect of the journey, and when she had finished repeating her little prayer that night, she said with the most exquisite simplicity, "Good bye, God—good bye, Jesus Christ,—I am going to Boston in the morning."

The New Orleans Bulletin adds, that it is not simply children, but grown people as well may feel that they may bid good-bye to all expectations of divine influence on going to Boston.

DISGRACEFUL ATTEMPT AT MURDER.—On Wednesday last week our streets were disgraced by one of the most diabolical outrages ever known to have taken place in open day light in any of our northern cities. Scenes of a somewhat similar character we sometimes hear or read of among the unprincipled slave holding population of the south, but during a residence of fifteen months in California in 1849 and '50, it was never our lot to witness so gross a violation of all laws, and disregard for the lives of fellow beings, as this which we are now compelled to record. The facts are briefly as follows: The inciting cause, almost equal to the consecutive transaction, was the publication of a scandal or slander by means of printed slips or bills, which were freely scattered about and posted up in the streets during the previous Sunday night. These bills were supposed to reflect upon the fair character of a young lady, daughter of J. E. Arnold, of Milwaukee, who has been spending a short time with acquaintances in this city. This vile publication met with proper indignation from every lover of decency and order in the city, and had no further notice been taken of it, the midnight assassin upon the private character of individuals would have received his just deserts, as have all publishers, of libels or retailers of scandal by the reciting of their own vicious weapons upon themselves alone.

Immediately upon hearing of this alleged scandal upon his daughter's character, Mr. Arnold hastened to this city armed with one of Colt's patent revolvers and a raw-hide. He had his revolver carefully loaded with powder and balls after he arrived at the Planter's, and openly avowed his determination to fulfil summary punishment with his own hand upon the individual whom he might believe to be the author or publisher of the said slip of scandal. After making some fruitless enquiries he was referred to Mr. J. W. Crawford for evidence in the matter, and accordingly addressed him a note to call at the Planter's hotel. Mr. C. immediately obeyed the summons, and, without weapons, wholly unprepared to meet a blood-thirsty foe, armed expressly to take the life of a fellow being, without allowing him a moment's warning to offer a prayer to his Maker, or to repeat a farewell to an affectionate family, met Arnold in the Planter's sitting room. After a few words had passed, Arnold drew forth his rawhide and struck Crawford, when Mr. C. overpowered Arnold, wrested the whip from him and repaid the cowardling. Arnold then attempted to draw his revolver from his pocket, upon which Crawford retreated into the street hotly pursued by the former, who discharged his murderous weapon three several times at his retreating victim, each time being sufficiently near to have killed him instantly, had not Arnold been under the tremor of excitement and rage. Mr. Crawford fell at the third shot, but upon examination no mark of a bullet could be discovered, and his fortunate escape was considered almost a miracle. Arnold was brought before Justice Mulberger and required to give bail for his appearance at the next term of the circuit court to answer the charge of assault with intent to kill.

The Register says: "If such a man as J. E. Arnold sets such an example, where can we expect to find respect for law and order? A drunk Indian could hardly have shown more contempt for the law of the land and the safety of the community."—Watertown Chronicle.

A FANCY MAN IN FEMALE APPAREL.—Immense instances have occurred lately where females, actuated by a desire of vindicating the principle of women's rights, have seen fit to "put the breeches on," but we have rarely heard of a case where masculinity has thought proper to robe itself in petticoats. A curious instance of this kind was developed in this city on Thursday afternoon. Officer Goodwin saw a figure purporting to be that of a lady, coming out of a hair dressing establishment not very far distant from the head of Hanover street; and although a thick green veil was worn by the unknown, a glimpse of the profile satisfied him that the person was not what the outside appearance would seem to indicate. He accordingly followed the suspicious character up Washington street and through a half a dozen cross streets, changing his dress four times to avoid the observation of the "chase." At length having arrived at the corner of Gardiner and Tremont streets, he accosted the stranger with "How do you do sir!" After some parley, the gentleman owned the deception, gave his name and residence, and begged to be let off. The mysterious character turned out to be a resident of a neighboring city, is a member of the church and belongs to the legal profession. He gave various reasons for his conduct, the most rational of which was that from youth up he had always had a fancy for wearing female apparel. Upon his arrival here, he put up at one of the most fashionable hotels, caused his name to be put on the register as Harriet Daniels, and completely deceived the landlord, attendant and guests, as to his sex. Upon visiting his room, the officers found two trunks, one of them containing half a dozen beautiful and costly lady's dresses, with all the necessary paraphernalia, jewels, trinkets, gewgaws, &c. The officers could not restrain their mirth as they overhauled the ribbons, lace, puff combs, corsets, bustles, artificial breast-works, fancy slippers, &c. Upon the representation of a gentleman who knew him, the officers were induced to release him the eccentric personage, thus depriving the police court country of a rich scene, the arraignment of a young man five feet three inches in height, for promenadeing the street in the open day, dressed as a fashionable belle.—Boston Mail.

IN A QUADRANT.—The Toledo Blade relates a capital incident which occurred the other day. The editor of the Blade fell in conversation with an individual who was formerly possessed of anti-slavery principles, whom he had not seen for some time. Says the Blade: Knowing what his convictions formerly were, we talked freely with him on the present crisis in public affairs, and began to express our feelings relative to the high-handed course of Douglas, Cushing & Co. We perceived he was rather mum, and disposed to change the conversation. At last, with the blandest kind of expression, he remarked, "I'm in rather a delicate situation." Not understanding the exact extent of the delicacy, we were obliged to press him still further, when he replied, "I suppose you know I am postmaster of L—," a fact of which we were entirely ignorant. The post office is worth about twenty-seven dollars thirty-four and a half cents a year.

EMPHATIC.—A democratic convention was lately held at Columbus, Ind., to nominate a candidate for congress. Immense noise to adjourn was carried. The result was then announced by the chairman, Col. Lee: "Gentlemen, I declare this convention adjourned, without a nomination, by G—d!"

ACCIDENT ON THE ACHONA RAILROAD.—Yesterday morning the regular passenger train came on the Aurora road, came in collision with a freight train about a mile this side of the junction. The breaks were ordered down as soon as the freight train came in sight, and the passenger train brought to a stand still, but the other was heavily loaded, and came against the locomotive of the passenger train with fearful violence. Both engines were badly injured, and the passengers escaped unhurt.—Chi. Journal

On motion of Ald. Pense, the petition was referred to the license committee, with instructions to report at the next meeting of the council.

An ordinance establishing the grade of High, Cherry and Academy streets, was introduced. Rules suspended and ordinance passed.
On motion of Ald. Milwaukee, amended by Ald. Pense, ordered that the bridge committee be instructed to report on the best manner of going on with and completing the upper bridge.

On motion of Ald. Dimock, William Macdon was added as a member of the board of health.

The council then adjourned.

COLLISION ON THE GALENA ROAD.—The morning passenger train on the Galena road, yesterday came in collision with a locomotive and tender, between Danby and Babcock's grove. It appears that the engineer of the single locomotive was running backwards towards Babcock's, considerably out of time, and consequently was going at rather a rapid rate. The engine of the passenger train struck the other with such force as to toss it completely into the air. It fell off the track a complete wreck. The passenger locomotive was also so badly injured that it was necessary to send back to Chicago by a hand car, to procure another, and the passenger train which should have arrived here at 10 o'clock A. M., yesterday, was delayed until late in the afternoon. No one injured that we learn.—Chicago Journal.

THE HUDSON BAY COMPANY TO BE WOUND UP.—In accordance with instructions from the United States secretary of state, Gov. Stevens has addressed the Hudson Bay company, taking the ground that "their right to trade with the Indians in Washington territory is not recognized, and will not longer be allowed," and granting them until the 1st of July next to wind up their affairs.

THE "KNOW NOTHINGS."—The following was pretty generally circulated in this city yesterday: A son of Erin, who has for some time been solicitous to know the whereabouts of the "Know Notthings" and has been "dogging" all about the city for the purpose of discovery, perceiving a light in the court house on Thursday evening, he at once concluded he had stumbled on the object of his search. Stealing a tip-toe, he drew near the door way, and cautiously entered. After listening awhile he saw a companion, highly gratified, and joining some companions, he imparted the important discovery he had made. "Och! sure," said he "they meet there every Thursday evening, and it is evident they know nothing, for devil a word do they say except in hieroglyphics." He had accidentally stumbled upon the city council while in session.—Louisville Democrat.

By comparing the resolutions of the state democratic convention of Wisconsin, five years ago, with the resolutions of the mass convention held lately at Madison, we find no substantial difference. The spirit, substance, and even the scope of the resolutions of both conventions are so nearly the same that one might suppose the authors of the first were the fathers of the other.—Grant, Co. Herald.

NEW PAPER AT BELOIT.—We see it noticed that a subscription is on foot at Beloit to raise money to start a new paper at Beloit, Rock Co., of the Douglas and Nebraska stripe, and that about $1,000 had been subscribed—that this money so subscribed is to be used as a loan to the publishers at an interest of 10 per cent. per annum, upon good security, and this is thought to be a great inducement to editors and publishers to start such a paper. It certainly shows a good deal of liberality in those men to offer to loan money on security at 10 per cent! They must want a paper bad! Somebody will be liberal enough, no doubt, to rent a building on as good terms for an office, and another for a dwelling if the publisher should need it, and all this in a county where there are already four papers besides an agricultural paper—in a county naturally rich and free soil, and the anti-Nebraska portion of the democratic party largely in the majority. A happy chance this! Won't somebody take it?—Elkhorn Reporter.

"What do you drive such a pitiful looking carcass as that for? Why don't you put a heavy coat of flesh on him?"
"A heavy coat of flesh? By the powers, the poor creature can hardly carry what little there is on him."

HOSPITAL BURN.—Last Sunday night, some person set fire to a building below town, which has been used by the city as a hospital for the sick. The mayor, by an advertisement, offers a reward of $200 for the apprehension of the miscreant who perpetrated the deed.—Galena Gaz., 22d.

AGAIN & AGAIN
THE BOSTON STORE.

Let the Horn be Blown!!
"Sound the loud trumpet of our land and our sea,"
"WHEELLOCK'S triumph, and ever shall be."

THIS is the middle of the nineteenth century, the first half of which has produced more change and onward movement than any fifty years of our Christian Era.

The great controlling power of this age is its commerce—indeed, this may be truly called the commercial age.

It has been well said by an ancient writer that "Man wants but little here below," and to supply those wants

WHEELLOCK Announces to every shopkeeper and every tongue, to both sexes and all parties, to all factions of all gangs, that finding his old store entirely

TOO SMALL! He has been compelled, in order to be able to supply the immense call for goods at his establishment, to Double the capacity of his Store Rooms! Having purchased this spring, for this market, to be sold this season,

$39,007 00 Worth of Goods But who can expect to read in the brief space of one life all the articles that the BOSTON STORE CONTAINS. Indeed, history must fail to give the searcher of knowledge any accurate idea of its treasures.

STOCK OF SUMMER GOODS, His inimitable selection of Fancy Dress Goods! He has over 10,000 Yards of Silk Barges, of every style and price, and it is with no great difficulty that he can furnish of this fair variety can select, FROM THE ONE THIRTIETH PARTS of all the latest and most fashionable styles, and such as will add to their exquisite beauty, though it may as a general thing, be as difficult to add to that beauty as it is to give it gold, paint the fly, or add perfume to the violet.

It must not be inferred that we offer only these and the many other articles for outer apparel, such as Chumelton and Foulard Silks, but all manner of Cotton, Grass & Linen Goods are on hand, so that every one may be entirely accommodated with every article of female apparel. Fixed Resolutions of our customers do not do without Ladies' Emmeled Boots, Emmeled sewed Congress Boots.

LADIES' SHOES TO POLARIS, and all the articles manufactured of the best styles. So that of this store, so far as articles which adorn La Belle see are concerned, it may be truly said

"COMFORT cannot state the infinite variety." While the Boston Store has made provision to protect the fact, it can also boast that it has all sorts of

GLOVES, by which hands can be protected and retain "The white rosy of fair Judd's hand."

And in taking leave of those of whom it is no exaggeration to say they are "Haven's last, best gift to man."

The Nonpareils of beauty, the Paragons of perfection, Mr. Wheellock has selected for his customers that his assistants and auxiliaries are those who will give knowledge of the business a fine personal presence and affability of manner to a determination to discharge their duty with their usual and respective duties, and while they may have the proper desire to effect sales, they will never in limitation of many of our contemporaries attempt to accomplish that object by equivocation, misrepresentation, exaggeration, tergiversation, or any other dishonest means.

And now to the wants of the COARSE-LAND SEX. Mr. Wheellock has every kind of material to make those articles of dress that give to man his individuality.

PANTALOONS, CALF "BEWITS," COW HIDE do., GAZELLE, do., PATENT LEATHER do., GIRAFFE do., HATS

And to the spectator who buys to sell again, The Boston Store can, at lower rates of usance than any other establishment west of the Allegheny mountains, furnish that class of exchanges so that riches will fill their pockets as water fills the sea. And to them we offer

POCKET HANDKERCHIEFS, Ink-stands, Cotton Yarn, Ready-made Vests, Ground Pepper, Flannels, Looking Glasses, Ready-made Over Coats, Pants, Rugs, Hats, Trunks and Cotton Fitting, Linters, Satchels, which include everything with sliding morning two bears on his arm, Chests, Norwegian Bandboxes and Hair Trunks, Tea, Tobacco and Wicking.

In the CROCKERY line may be found the BENNINGTON, the PARIAN and the LAVA Manufacture, Picnic or for the table, and many more for washing, for bread and milk, or sugar. Crock dusters, children's Toys and Flower Pots, MAINE LIQUOR LAW VOLUMES and Lager Beer Mugs.

And in fine, the proprietor of this establishment can with all confidence assure those who have been in the habit of trading at Janesville that, although they have "often seen corruption built and bubble till 'T o'erturns the die,"

they will find that the representations which shall be made to them by that proprietor or his clerks will not "Stand like foglets in a Barber shop, More in stock than mark."

New England Mutual Life Ins., of Boston, Mass., Chartered in 1843, Capital and accumulation, $650,000.

THIS Company is one of the oldest, and among the most prudently and successfully conducted in the country. The primary object in conducting business has been to provide for the security under all conceivable circumstances, for the payment of its losses under its policies, and to return to the insured the surplus at stated periods, and strict economy is observed.

Every insured person is a member of the company and shares in the profits of the business, and is subject to no liability or assessments beyond his premium. The directors are required to be peculiarly interested in the company, and their personal attention; and bonds of sufficient security are given by its officers for the faithful performance of their duties. Insurance may be effected for the benefit of the wife, which is secured to her by law beyond the reach of a husband's creditors; and creditors may insure the life of debtors.

Highly Important to Farmers.

THE ONLY EXCLUSIVE FARMERS' INSURANCE COMPANY IN THE WEST.

THE MADISON MUTUAL, LOCATED AT MADISON, WISCONSIN.

THIS Company continues to take risks upon Farm Property only, consisting of buildings of all kinds, (belonging to farmers), household furniture, grain in barns, live stock, &c., from one to five years, at lower rates than any other reliable company. In this company all such property is rejected positively, by LISTING THEM ALONE.

We believe it to be for the interest of the farmers to insure by themselves, their property being less hazardous than any other. Cases where you will have no losses only your own of the same class, and all will be on an equal footing.

Experience has shown that two-thirds, if not three-fourths of all the fires that occur upon farmsteads, barns, mills, shops and such like property, in this company all such property is rejected positively, by LISTING THEM ALONE.

Farmers, look to your own interest, and insure in a Farmers' company.

We have been doing business a little over three years, and we have not been obliged to assess our premium notes, and for the last fourteen months we have not had a single dollar loss, though doing a large and prosperous business, which we believe to be without a parallel in the history of insurance.

The best of references given as to the responsibility of the company.
